Baby Bonus Change Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament are headed for belated summer vacations—or early electioneering—after ordering an end to a port strike on the St. Lawrence and watching a new baby-bonus plan disappear into at least temporary oblivion.

Paul Hellyer (Ind.-L.-Toronto Trinity), a former Liberal cabinet minister, provided suitable drama for the end of a sitting by single-handedly scuppering the government's family allowance plan.

Mr. Hellyer used a procedural tactic to stop debate on the bill —which would give larger baby bonuses to the poor, none to the rich and less to those in between—and thus prevent passage of the bill.

He said he himself was opposed to the highly controversial bill and even some Liberals had asked him to oppose it.

The bill would have passed had it been allowed to come to a vote. The Liberals and Conservatives would have supported it and the New Democratic Party would have opposed.

Health Minister John Munro, who had fought for passage over a long period, said Mr. Hellyer's action was irresponsible and he was flouting the will of Parliament.

Stanley Knowles, NDP House Leader, said Mr. Hellyer stopped debate from the wrong motives and for the wrong reasons but that he had done the people of Canada a service.

By next summer the government had hoped to increase the size of family allowance payments under the new plan to five of 10 families in Canada under a complicated formula that took into account the size of family and income.

Mr. Munro said if Parliament sits again Sept. 28, as scheduled, the legislation will appear again. The Liberal party was committed to it.

But others expressed doubt that the legislation will ever see the light of day again in its present form.

It is known that some Liberals, even cabinet members, and some Conservatives were opposed to it because it would take payments away from many in the middle class and because of bureaucratic tangles that many expected would result from the necessity of determining the income of applicants.

Now MPs are heading back to their constituencies wondering whether they will get one more sitting of the 27th Parliament under their belts before an election.

A widely held assumption when Parliament resumed in February was that this was the last sitting, but Prime Minister Trudeau kept everybody guessing right up to Friday. Twice during the sitting he shot down election speculation, the last time with an invitation to talk to him at the end of the summer.

Skinnydips Set Scene

Times News Services

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — A nude girl, with a butterfly tattoo on her posterior, capered among other youths "skinnydipping" in Flamingo Park's swimming pool here Friday night.

Nearby, other youths lounged under a huge banyan tree, swatting mosquitoes and complaining about the shortage of pot. The pungent odor of marijuana filled the air while a strolling pensioner stopped to argue religion with a chanting Hare Krishna devotee, dressed flowing robes.

The youths, living in tent camps set up in the palm shaded recreational areas in the centre of Miami Beach's retirement community, have gathered to take part in demonstrations supporting and opposing the Democratic national convention which opens here Monday.

Following the bitter and divisive political convention four years ago in Chicago, the Democrats set out to reform their party — to make it representative of all the people.

Delegates gathering in Miami Beach now are, to some extent, meeting that goal. But in other respects, the delegates are representative of a U.S. elite.

There are more women, more blacks, more young persons. But the old ingredients of money and education and class still dominate the proceedings.

Of these Democratic delegates, independent surveys show, 39 per cent hold postgraduate degrees. Less than four per cent of all U.S. citizens have done post-graduate work. And 31 per cent of the delegates have family incomes of more than $25,000 a year as opposed to only five per cent of the nation at large.

Half the delegates questioned said their first choice for president was George McGovern. The remainder gave their allegiance to the other candidates in the following order: Hubert Humphrey, 13 per cent, Edmund Muskie, nine per cent, George Wallace, six per cent, Shirley Chisholm, three per cent, Henry Jackson, three per cent, Wilbur Mills, one per cent.

Wallace, who arrived in Miami Friday after being released from hospital in Silver Spring, Md., where he was taken after he was shot May 15, vowed to pick up his campaign where he left off and insist on a rewriting of the Democratic party platform.

"We were temporarily sidelined from the fight," he said from his wheelchair, "but we shall continue to try to represent the people of this great state and the people of this nation who feel as we do."

Yes Vote By IWA Indicated

Early balloting by members of the striking International Woodworkers of America shows a trend towards acceptance of the contract offer from Forest Industrial Relations, bargainers for 115 coast-forest companies.

Latest results, with Duncan members voting strongly in favor of accepting the contract offer and Victoria members voting to reject it, showed a total of 4,225 votes in favor of the contract and 3,145 against it.

Today, members of the Port Alberni, Courtenay and Haney locals vote on the offer, with the 5,000-member Port Alberni local expected to be a major factor in the final outcome.

MIXED ADVICE

The Port Alberni local executive decided to recommend rejection of the contract to its members but local president Earl Foxcroft, a member of the IWA coast negotiating team, had recommended acceptance.

A similar situation exists in Haney, where the local executive went against the recommendation of president Art Stark and recommended rejection. The Haney local has about 1,500 members.

The 1,500-member Courtenay local got no recommendation from its local executive other than the negotiating committee's approval of the offer.

HEAVY VOTE

A local spokesman said voting at Courtenay was heavy Friday and today. No recommendation has been made to the members, he said, "because there was no point in confusing the situation any further."

The Duncan local announced that its members voted 1,374 to 604 to accept the contract. The Victoria members voted 489 to 378 to reject the contract.

The FIR offer is for a 73 cents an hour increase over two years, plus improved fringe benefits. About 28,000 coast woodworkers have been on strike since June 22 to back up their demands.

Vancouver fallers voted Friday 152 to 1 to reject FIR's latest offer to them, which was $80.52 for a 6½-hour day. The fallers want to keep their piece-rate formula but want a standard formula applied to all areas. They have been staging a wildcat walkout for several months.

Theatre Rejects B.C. Film

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Odeon Theatres Friday turned down a chance to show a 30-minute film entitled "Twenty Great Years in British Columbia" that — depending on whom you listen to — is or is not a propaganda film for the Social Credit government.

Odeon vice-president Gerry Sutherland said after a screening that the film was visually good and contained some interesting historical material, but was too long and had an "appalling" commentary.

NEWS LEAKED

News of the film leaked out Thursday when B.C. Conservative leader Derrill Warren said he had found out about it.

The movie was made by Lew Parry of North Vancouver, producer of the controversial movie "The Good Life" which preceded the last provincial election. Political opponents called that movie thinly-disguised election propaganda for the government.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett Friday vehemently denied that Twenty Great Years was made by the government and said it was financed by private contributions from individual citizens.

'FACTUAL'

The movie opens with a picture of the B.C. government crest, followed by the introduction:

"Dedicated to those hundreds of thousands of people by whose faith in the principle of democratic government British Columbians now enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world — friends and supporters of free enterprise government present: 20 great years in British Columbia."

Anderson made the comment after viewing portions of the film on CBC television.

Plant Problems Preclude Talks

The Victoria Newspaper Council of Unions Friday requested a resumption of negotiations in the contract dispute with Victoria Press Ltd. in a meeting between representatives of the two parties.

The company, in a bulletin to employees, said it does not wish to meet with the unions "in the climate of the present plant problems."

Both the Times and the Colonist have been from two to as much as 3½ hours later than normal in completing production runs in the past few days.

"The company said that when operations have returned to normal they will be pleased to sit down with the council," said Victoria Press general manager J. C. Melville in the bulletin.

Talks between the company and the five unions representing 330 employees at the plant broke off nine days ago, when each side agreed to contact the other if it came up with a possible method to overcome the impasse in negotiations.

The newspaper council — made up of mailers, pressmen, newspaper guild, stereotypers and typographical workers — said in a separate bulletin that on Friday "the unions advised management that they had some suggestions that might break the bargaining deadlock and lead to a settlement. "The answer from the company was that they were not prepared to meet under present conditions," the union bulletin said.

There have been lengthy delays in production of both the Daily Colonist and the Times over the past week, which the Victoria Press management said "coincides with a hiatus in negotiations."

The unions said in their bulletin: "The company was told that the feelings of frustration and resentment over not reaching a settlement might be overcome and perhaps corrected if it was announced that a meeting had been set up in an attempt to resolve the dispute.

"The company indicated that they would pass our suggestion for meetings on to their principals," the unions said.

Negotiations for a new contract for the five unions have been going on since last September. Contracts for four of the unions expired Jan. 1 and the fifth expired April 30.

Moslems Fought

MANILA (UPI) — Outnumbered government troops backed by combat helicopters and ships fought today with a band of Moslem marauders believed responsible for killing more than 70 persons in the Southern Philippines during the past three days.

PCs Vow to Cut Arbitration Laws

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Conservative party is committed to the elimination of direct government intervention in protracted labor disputes, party leader Derril Warren said Friday.

If his party forms the next provincial government, Warren said, its first act would be to repeal Section 18 of the Mediation Commission Act, which requires compulsory government arbitration.

"We would substitute a new provision requiring independent arbitration in which the members of the arbitration board would be selected by the disputing parties," he said. "There would be no government participation."

Warren told a news conference that the recommendations of his proposed independent commission would only become final and binding upon the passage of a bill by the legislature.

"If required, the legislature would be called into special session in order to get the bill through," he said.

Warren's announcement was contained in two draft proposals that outlined his party's policy in regard to industrial relations and environmental control.

Referring to his party's policy on industrial relations, he said:

"Our unequivocal policy objective is the elimination of strikes and lockouts as the means of settling industrial disputes."

Other industrial relations policies proposed by Warren include the Canadianization of unions and the reconstruction of existing labor-management committees to carry on year-round discussions.

Warren also said a Conservative government would establish a separate provincial department solely responsible for pollution control and its elimination.

His party would provide the new department with teeth by means of a pollution control act, he said.

U.S. 'Hopeful'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger said today there is "some reason to believe" North Vietnam will take "a new approach" when the Paris peace talks resume next Thursday.

"But we cannot guarantee it," Kissinger told reporters as he answered questions about Vietnam peace efforts.

Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, said there has been "very intensive diplomatic activity" behind the scenes since the Paris talks were suspended more than two months ago.

In direct and indirect contacts with the North Vietnamese, he said, "The United States made clear that it is willing to systematically discuss the issues blocking settlement of the long and costly war."

"We have made it very clear that this will be our approach," Kissinger said. "We believe this attitude has been fully conveyed to Hanoi and we have some reason to believe they will approach these negotiations in something like the same spirit."

Kissinger said the U.S. is not interested in resuming the Paris talks unless Hanoi adopts a more "constructive attitude."

ILLEGAL HORMONE IN BEEF

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Traces of the growth hormone diethylstilbestrol (DES) have been found in 4 of 363 samples of domestic beef liver in tests by the federal health department.

A special advisory committee on DES is scheduled to meet in Ottawa next week, to review the recent Canadian findings and similar U.S. findings and advise the government whether any action is required — including possible legal action against the producers of the contaminated meat or even a complete ban on the use of the chemical.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health, explained Friday that legally no DES is allowed in meat for human consumption.

In the four contaminated samples, about two parts per billion were found — similar to amounts found in a similar meat survey in the U.S.

Dr. Morrison said that the findings strongly suggest that some meat producers in Canada are not using the drug according to direction."

The chemical is widely used to stimulate growth in cattle. Farmers are supposed to take beef cattle off DES at least two days before slaughtering to ensure that no DES remains in the meat.

The chemical has recently been linked with vaginal cancer in women. And doctors in Canada have been warned not to use it on pregnant women.

RIOT ENDS 'SECRET' PARTY

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP) — Forty persons, three of them young women, were arrested in this community near Hamilton early today after a near-riot broke out on a downtown street.

About 60 policemen, many of them rushed into the area from nearby communities, were needed to control a mob of about 200 that jeered at police, threw beer bottles and attacked police cars.

One side of the first police car arriving at the scene was almost completely kicked in. But little other property damage occurred and there were no injuries.

The disturbance followed a provincial police raid on an overnight, open-air, beer-drinking party, which is held annually in the area.

Each year, organizers and participants shift the site of the party to try to keep its location a secret from police. But police discovered the location without difficulty Friday night and made their raid.

With the party ruined, disappointed crowds surged downtown to continue drinking at local hotels.

Two Dundas policemen were called to the front of a hotel about 1 a.m. to break up a boisterous crowd.

One of them, Sgt. Michael Driscoll, said that about 30 persons in front of the hotel began "yelling and screaming, throwing bottles and glasses and jumping on the cruiser."

Two or three arrests were made. But the crowd soon increased to about 200 and Dundas police had to call in reinforcements from neighboring communities.

When reinforcements arrived, the street was sealed off and mass arrests began.

Wedges of policemen moved through the mob, dragging or carrying away troublemakers as bystanders yelled and jeered. There were some attempted escapes and one successful one — a youth who dashed to freedom with his hands still handcuffed.

Those arrested were taken by paddy wagon to Hamilton. Most were charged with liquor and disturbance offences.

SUNNY SKIES FOR ECLIPSE

Victoria should have sunny skies with a few cloudy intervals for the eclipse of the sun Monday, the weather office said today.

The eclipse will begin at 11:10 a.m. and last until 1:28 p.m., with the peak at 12:18 p.m., when the moon will mask 46 per cent of Victoria's sun.

The only Canadians to witness a total eclipse will be in parts of the North West Territories, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Soctia and Prince Edward Island.

However, anyone planning to watch the spectacle is warned by the National Research Council to do so indirectly. Looking directly at the sun during the eclipse can cause immediate and permanent eye damage.

The best method is to bore a small hole in a piece of cardboard and allow the sun's rays to pass through it to reflect an image of the eclipse on the ground or a wall. The popular idea that sunglasses, color film negatives or binoculars provide enough protection is false, they said.

Sierra Club Protests BCFP Logging Operation

The Sierra Club Friday criticized B.C. Forest Products Ltd. for planning to log a corridor adjoining the west coast trail before federal and provincial governments have agreed on a boundary for the wilderness coastal belt.

The boundary in the Port Renfrew area is still under negotiations between the two senior governments, club chairman Rick Careless said.

"They are moving on public lands and disturbing a forest area before a boundary decision has been made."

But Jack Toovey, BCFP assistant chief forester, said the company has no intention of rushing the logging operations.

The B.C. government has proposed a buffer zone a half-mile wide.

The Sierra Club first advocated a three-mile buffer zone but later compromised with a half-mile strip. The matter is under discussions between federal and provincial governments.

The dispute follows construction of a company bridge across the Gordon River. BCFP plans to log the corridor which varies between eight and 10 miles in width.

Toovey said he appreciated the concern the Sierra Club is showing for preserving the natural beauty of the trail.

"We are not and have never been opposed to the trail," he said. "It will become in a few years one of the world's most famous trails."

Toovey is familiar with the scenic coastal footpath and has supported its preservation from the start.

He said logging operations along the boundary would not take place all at once. Patch logging would be carried out over many years.

"We may not even log right to the boundary as some of trees appear to be marginal," he added.

He said logging across the Gordon River was part of the company's progressive logging plan and had nothing to do with the boundary controversy.

Careless said Toovey missed the point.

"The company plans to log in an area which is being considered as parkland," he said. "Seeing that this is public land it is not unreasonable to ask the company to wait its turn — wait until the governments has made a land-use decision."

Stanfield Tries Whistle-Stop Style Campaign

tion policies without high unemployment.

GRAVENHURST, Ont. (CP) — After what aides considered a successful dry run for an election campaign, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield completes a three-day tour of Ontario today, conducted in oldtime whistle-stop style.

Driving through 15 small towns north and west of Toronto, Mr. Stanfield has spent most of his time strolling sidewalks, greeting passers-by with a handshake and a how-do-you-do.

The only concessions to modern campaign tactics have been appearances on radio open-line programs and a ride in a float plane today from Lake Vernon to Parry Sound.

While the groups who saw the Conservative leader were generally small in the tiny towns, they were uniformly responsive.

Without creating the frenzy often sparked by a Trudeau tour, Mr. Stanfield's understated style seemed to fit the traditional main-streeting approach.

MEETS COTTAGERS

Having stopped in Owen Sound, Meaford, Thornbury, Collingwood and the garish resort of Wasaga Beach Friday, his schedule for today included more mingling with shoppers in Gravenhurst and Bracebridge, thronged with cottagers in the Muskoka Lakes region.

He also was to meet a group of students in Bracebridge, hold a news conference in Huntsville, picnic at Muskoka Pioneer Village and main street again in Parry Sound.

He returns to Ottawa tonight.

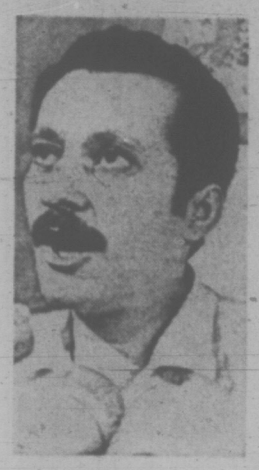
While Mr. Stanfield made clear he is not predicting a fall election, spokesmen voiced satisfaction that the walking-paced tour is good model for the eventual campaign.

Most of the trip covered ridings now held by Conservatives, but the biggest crowd appeared in the Liberal riding of Bruce, where more than 1,000 people showed up for a free barbecue.

Other events included a lunch speech to the Owen Sound Kiwanis Club Friday and receptions with business and county leaders in several centres.

Tours of glass and carpet factories also marked Friday's schedule.

Chit-chat dominated the trip. In a few remarks on issues, Mr. Stanfield reiterated party policy —calling for more incentives for Canadian businessmen, programs to improve rural life and anti-inflation policies without high unemployment.



KANAFANI

Blast Kills Guerrilla

BEIRUT (AP) — A Palestinian guerrilla leader was killed in Beirut today by a booby trap that wrecked his sportscar as he turned the ignition key, police reported.

The victim, Ghassan Kanafani, 36, was spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and a novelist well known in the Arab world.

The explosion also killed his niece, Lamiss, 15, in the seat beside him.

A high Lebanese security official claimed Israel has sent unidentified persons from the occupied West Bank of the River Jordan to carry out assassinations in retaliation for the May 30 massacre at Tel Aviv airport.

Palestinian sources said it could not be ruled out that a dissident faction of the front, or Jordanian agents, were responsible for the blast.

Kanafani, editor of the magazine Al Hadaf, issued statements in the name of the front, including one in May claiming responsibility for the Tel Aviv airport massacre in which 28 persons were killed and scores injured.

Revival Groups Puff New Life Into Religion

NEW YORK (AP) — Like the wind, the spirit moves where it will, Jesus observed, and you can't calculate its source, dimensions or destination. But the statistics suggest that a current of it is whipping up a considerable modern gale.

At the start of its new outburst six years ago in 1967, only about 60 people showed up at a meeting about it at Notre Dame University. In 1968, the number rose to 150; in 1969, to 450; in 1970, to 1,400, in 1971, to 5,000.

Recently, at the 1972 International Conference on Charismatic Renewal, 11,500 persons were on hand to attest to one of the fastest-swelling movements in the churches of the United States.

"We've come to count on it about tripling each year," says Sister Marie Catherine, press co-ordinator for the affair. She says the rising turnout provides a clue to the over-all growth in participation.

From the small, sporadic beginnings in Roman Catholicism six years ago, an estimated 60,000 to 100,000 Catholics across the country now are involved.

The "charismatic revival," it's sometimes called.

The "charismatic revival," it's sometimes called.

It is bringing a "breath of the Holy Spirit to enliven the church once more," Rev. Edward O'Connor, a Roman Catholic theologian, says in a recent issue of St. Anthony Messenger.

The phenomenon broke out in main-line Protestant churches about 10 years earlier, including Episocoplians Anglicans, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Baptists and Methodists, and estimates put the total now involved at more than 500,000.

"Baptism in the Spirit," is a key aspect of it, an experience which participants say ordinarily occurs in group prayer and gives people a deepened sense of closeness to God and to each other.

Although modern manifestations of it are broadly ecumenical, the Notre Dame gathering was largely Roman Catholic, with a sprinkling of Protestants.

All of them brought stories of new groups springing up around the country in homes, churches and borrowed halls.

As the movement has expanded, it has come under sharpening analysis.

Kevin Ranaghan, co-author of Catholic Pentecostals, published by Paulist Press, told the Notre Dame meeting that participants must avoid attitudes suggesting they are a "special 'in group' or select few who have the whole truth."

FIND RELIEF

Besides the characteristics of intense prayer, spontaneous singing, reported healings and heightened sense of mutual concern, one of the movement's most mystifying aspects is praising God in an "unknown tongue," an outpouring of syllables called glossolalia.

Dr. John P. Kildahl, a New York psychologist who has studied the phenomenon, says person experiencing tongues-speaking usually have gone through an anxiety crisis and find relief from it.

In a book published by Harper and Row, The Psychology of Speaking in Tongues, he says the new confidence resulting from glossolalia extends to all areas of a person's life, making him bolder in business and personal relationships.

However, he concludes that "tongues-speaking is a learned phenomenon" acquired in a suggestive atmosphere resembling hypnosis.

A linguistic expert, William Samarin of the University of Toronto, says in another book, Tongues of Men and Angels, issued by Macmillan, that tongues-speaking is a kind of "pseudolanguage," like bebop singing.

HORSING AROUND

CARDIFF, Wales (UPI)—Patients at the Lansdown Hospital can be forgiven for thinking they are delirious when they see horses galloping up and down the hospital corridors.

But the horses are real and frequently invade the hospital grounds. In one case five amorous stallions chased their mares through the hospital buildings.

"We have no idea where they come from," a hospital spokesman said, "But they get in from time to time."

Nose-to-Nose Suits Bennett

Premier Bennett praised federal Finance Minister John Turner Friday for getting out and visiting the provinces and said he hoped other federal departments would follow Turner's example.

Bennett took the opportunity to again condemn formal federal-provincial conferences where federal and provincial leaders "spend the whole day giving set speeches and never get down to brass tacks."

Turner and Bennett met for 90 minutes in the premier's office Thursday to discuss a variety of questions and then had another hour together over lunch.

Bennett said Friday that Turner had congratulated B.C. for not causing Ottawa the monetary problems some other provinces had by negotiating loans outside Canada.

UPWARD PRESSURE

Turner had said earlier the provinces had borrowed $600 million on the foreign money market between April and June and this along with $700 million in short-term borrowing, caused partly by competition among the banks, had generated severe upward pressure on the Canadian dollar.

Bennett said he also pointed out to Turner that many provinces could do more in the fight against inflation through greater efficiency.

"B.C. is the only province that has had the courage to take action by setting the wage guidelines (6.5 per cent) and we don't mind short-term criticism for long-term benefit," the premier said.

Rain, Mud Don't Halt Young Riders

Through rain and mud and a horde of mosquitoes, the Canadian Pony Club's B.C. show must go on.

A 2½-mile cross-country race this morning over a difficult and muddy course opened the second day of the three-day rally in Saanich which has attracted 60 teen-aged riders from across the province.

Winners from this rally will be sent to the National Pony Rally in August.

But they don't ride ponies.

The name comes from early riding clubs in England when children were relegated to riding ponies. But, as pony populations declined and pony clubs spread all over the world, full grown horses became the order of day.

Many of the young riders at this weekend's rally are looking beyond the national rally to the Olympics where the three-day equestrian event is a sophisticated version of the pony club's event.

The competition tests all aspects of the horse's training and performance. Precision in the ring is tested the first day, endurance the second and obedience the third.

During today's cross-country race, riders were graded on their jumps and timing. They are expected to keep a steady pace of 475 metres a minute over the hilly, bush terrain.

One observer said mud had made the course a "suicide run" and riders would have to walk difficult parts.

City Union Charged

The Victoria local of the Carpenters and Joiners Union has been charged with defying the cabinet back-to-work order under Section 18 of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act.

The move follows charges against four Vancouver union locals late in June. Two locals of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and locals of the Heat, Frost and Asbestos Workers and Cement Masons Union were charged.

All the charges followed raids by RCMP officers of union offices throughout the province.

Plane Airlifts Cycle Victim To Hospital

A 21-year-old Courtenay motorcyclist, suffering brain injuries and multiple fractures, was flown to Victoria this morning after an accident at 1:35 a.m. today in the up-Island city.

Vance Goosen was injured in a collision with the rear of a pickup truck parked on Woods Ave., RCMP said. The truck is owned by Ken Edin, 17, of Cumberland.

Goosen was first taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox and later flown here aboard a Canadian Forces Labrador rescue helicopter.

Nanoose Crash Kills Man, 60

NANOOSE (CP) — Carl McInroy, 60, of Agassiz, was killed Friday in a two-car collision in this Vancouver Island community.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here MON. & TUES.

NOW IS THE TIME
To carry out that long delayed resolution to "do something about your hair."

New home treatment methods for improving your hair will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, July 10 and 11.

Harrison Hair and Scalp specialists are sending trichologist I. Edgar to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m., Monday and Tuesday at the Sussex hotel.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD BALDNESS
Your hair is a natural asset—especially today, when the "youthful" look is so important in your business and personal life. Keep your hair alive, healthy and growing. Remember, in most cases, nothing can make hair grow again once it is gone. Your hair usually starts to thin at the temples, the crown, or right across the back of the head. It thins slowly, day by day, and sometimes you don't notice that bald spot until it's too late.

NEGLECT CAN START HAIR LOSS
It is surprising how many people neglect the warning signs —and sometimes they are quite unaware of the damage they are doing. But you can recognize the danger signals — dandruff, falling hair, itchy scalp, too-oily or too dry hair — these are all signs that your hair and scalp could be in a poor, unhealthy condition. Pay attention to these danger signals and seek help.

DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE
Your hair is in better condition today than it will be next month or even next week. That is why we urge you to see Mr. Edgar before more damage is done.

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION
See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how the Harrison method permits you to save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home. For an examination and discussion of your hair problems come to the hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday, anytime between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. and ask the desk clerk for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

Bennett Opens 'Champagne' Display

Project 70, the Provincial Museum's "champagne idea," was opened to the public Friday.

Its designers "have been accused of having champagne ideas on a beer budget," museum director J. Bristol Foster admitted during opening ceremonies. Now completed, it "will set a standard for all other Canadian museums to follow."

The project, the museum's first permanent display, consists of a series of full-size exhibits from B.C.'S history working backwards in history from the present to the 1700s.

"We have tried for the delicate balance between something entertaining and something relevant," Foster said.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett officially opened the display to about 200 invited guests by cutting the ribbon across the doorway.

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan handed the scissors to Bennett telling him to "perform your midwife duties" and "cut the umbilical cord."

After the ceremonies Kiernan said he thought the museum staff "have done first class work" in preparing the exhibit.

"It tells history without hammering 'history at you,'" he said.

Kiernan, who said he had "sort of kept an eye on it" from the start, stated that support from the private sector had made the exhibit possible.

Bennett said the project "just shows what can be done with a great idea handled by dedicated people."

"It's a moving thing," he said.

The display, the first phase of Project 70, called the British Columbia Modern History Galleries, has been under construction for two years.

Three other phases will be completed during the 1970s. Ethnology and archaeology, marine biology and natural history will be added to the museum's permanent display during the next eight years.

The modern history galleries begin with graphics and artifacts representing life in B.C. during the last 60 years. The central feature of this exhibit is a "Fleet 11" biplane suspended from the ceiling.

The plane first flew in B.C. in 1930.

A street typical of Victoria or the lower mainland, complete with a Grand Hotel, a saloon and a sporting goods store makes up the display for the 1870s to the 1920s.

A continuing slide show on the exhibit is held in The Roxy Theatre, a two-thirds size replica of the original Nanaimo Opera House. The interior is a replica of the Vancouver Rex Theatre.

Other displays show fishing, logging and farming techniques through the years. A model of a hardrock mine near Rossland and of gold mining at Barkerville show the history of mining in B.C.

INITIATIVE PROJECTS COMPLETED BY SAANICH

Saanich municipality has completed a busy winter of Local Initiative Projects.

Bert Richman, Saanich parks administrator, said 30 men were employed over a four-month period on parks projects costing $150,000.

Road and sidewalk clean-up projects costing $146,101 employed 25 men and a $275,000 waterworks project gave work to a similar number.

The local initiative programs were financed on a cost-sharing basis between the federal, provincial and municipal governments with men hired through Canada Manpower.

Park projects saw the completion of new fieldhouses at Prospect Lake and Hyacinth Parks, change rooms at Lambrick Park and a new equipment shed at Cedar Hill golf course.

Park clearing work was done at Copley, Mt. Tobnie, Gorge, Elk Lake and Beaver Lake Parks. Trails were cleared at Cedar Hill Park and three new beach accesses were constructed.

Frank Smith, general supervisor of public works, said road programs cleaned up 20 miles of roadside ditches and constructed many new footpaths.

One man was hired by the department to rehabilitate street and traffic signs in the municipality.

A waterworks program replaced 10 miles of two-inch water drains with larger diameter drains.

Richman said his department was "very pleased" with the outcome of the projects and hopes similar programs can be financed next year.

Flame Leaps to Maui Lead

Flame of Vancouver, a 48-foot sloop owned by Warren Nesbit, took the lead Friday in the 2,300-mile Victoria to Maui yacht race as the 17 boats still in contention broke into two distinct groups.

Flame was at the head of the fleet and at the head of one group of nine yachts driving down the direct route to Maui. The second group was following a route 250 miles further south.

Flame was well out in front of her colleagues on the northern route, with Bluey II of Vancouver 100 miles behind followed by Siren, Aukele, Kinohi, Allegra, Lucy Alice, Penzance and Eviva.

The leader of the southern group was Patriot, a 30-foot sloop from Seattle skippered by owner J. M. Marta. Patriot was trailing flame by 20 miles in terms of Maui.

Following on Patriot's heels and spread over 40 miles of ocean were Odusa, Nautical II, Cherokee, Satin Doll, Co-Motion and Red Dog — all of Seattle — and Sargasso II of Portland.

It was a curious grouping, with the southerly group made up entirely of American yachts and the northerly bunch mostly Canadian boats.

Two boats have withdrawn since the race began Saturday.

Trailing the fleet was Eviva, a 45-foot ketch from Vancouver. She was 200 miles behind her closest competitor and 450 miles behind Flame.

Canada Firecracker Ban Urged by Marshals' Body

TORONTO (CP)—The Association of Canadian Fire Marshals and Fire Commissioners passed a resolution Friday calling for a ban on firecrackers throughout Canada.

They called for legislation to outlaw the manufacture, importation, storage, sale and use of firecrackers. The resolution, adopted at a meeting here, was directed to the department of energy, mines and resources and asked for amendment of the Explosives Act to implement the ban.

In most provinces the sale and use of firecrackers is regulated by individual municipalities.

Trio Defies Death In Australia March

PERTH (Reuter)—Two Englishmen and a New Zealander are ignoring repeated warnngis that they face almost certain death if they continue their 1,000-mile march across some of Australia's most treacherous desert country, police said today.

A policeman and an official who drove 89 miles into the arid country 600 miles north of here to warn the men said on return that the three would not believe there was no water on the route.

They also face 800 ridges of sand hills, some 130 feet high, between them and their destination.

The men, brothers John and Peter Waterfall, aged 27 and 26, and New Zealander Murray Rankin, 28, set off to cross the desert Monday in an attempt to prove the feat was possible.

Each is pulling a handcart carrying 160 pounds of food and four gallons of water, but experts say water holes on the way have either caved in or are polluted.

On the Beach at Miami

From vantage points on the sidelines, Canadians Monday may watch the opening of what can only superficially be dismissed as the quadrennial American political circus. The opening of the Democratic National Convention at Miami Beach will mark the beginning of a week's activities strictly American and in the tradition of that country, but of portent to Canada. Beneath the gaudy showmanship of the event significant currents in American thought and political direction will become apparent — and inevitably impose their influence on the northern neighbor.

The man — or, most improbably, the woman — chosen to carry the Democratic standard in the presidential race will not necessarily be bound by the policies and aspirations laid down at the convention. History frequently proves the contrary among those eventually elected to high office. Yet issues of the moment will be defined and in many instances they will be issues of direct concern to Canadians. The ideas and concepts will persist, regardless of the fortunes of the candidates.

At a time when so many American problems are shared with other nations — control of pollution, economic policy, war and peace among them — no Canadian can be indifferent to an event from which will emerge the Democratic presidential candidate. How, Canadians want to know, would such a person approach the issue of American exploitation of Canadian resources and dominance of Canadian industry?

Behind the hijinks, the rhetoric and stage-managing of the convention is business from which Canadians cannot be divorced.

So they will watch the now familiar but still strange antics of a national political convention in the United States. Reactions to it will vary according to the understanding and the emotions of the viewers. Yet the one point that can never be overlooked is clear: The party which offers the only feasible alternative to the administration in Washington is picking the person who could assume what is probably the most powerful office on earth, certainly among the democracies. That is no laughing matter.

Victoria Seat

British Columbia's Liberal leader David Anderson has decided to test his provincial political muscle in Victoria, eliminating speculation about the riding he would choose. Various factors make the selection sensible. He is close to home, the area in which he should be best known. Local coverage of his activities in Ottawa and elsewhere as Esquimalt-Saanich M.P. has been extensive. He enters the arena against a provincial cabinet member heavily attacked for failing to give his constituents the representation they expect — a charge, in the federal context, from which he is not himself entirely immune. And he has established a reputation as a staunch champion in the anti-pollution war which musters strong forces in the capital region.

But regardless of the constituency he chose, as provincial Liberal leader he is confronted by a premier — and close friend of the minister he challenges — who has demonstrated an impressive ability to gather votes and carry his cohorts with him. David Anderson will not be pitting himself against Trade and Industry minister Waldo Skillings alone. He will be facing W. A. C. Bennett.

Like others before him, Mr. Anderson will come to recognize, probably already does, that politics and political success in British Columbia require different assets than those effective federally.

At all events his entry into the dual-member city riding provides an alternative to the non-retiring existing Social Credit member, a prospect that will seem pleasing to a large number of Victoria voters.

Music on the Summer Air

The concert-in-the-park theme assumes new dimensions for Victorians next Saturday when the first of two introductory performances of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra's Victoria Summer Festival is held in Centennial Square.

The concept of these open air, admission-free concerts represents an outstanding achievement by Mr. Laszlo Gati to bring the excellent musical organization he directs to the people of the community and their summer visitors in a way that should enhance support for the symphony as it furnishes delight to the listeners.

The format of the series shows imagination and an appreciation of popular taste. Following the first two performances, the one at Centennial Square and the second at the Cameron bandshell, two one-hour concerts will be given each Monday and Wednesday evening, one at 6 o'clock, the other at 7 in Heritage Court — a sunset promenade through music, pleasant settings and the summer evening. Should rain interfere, the events will be transferred to Christ Church Cathedral.

Here is an opportunity for Victorians unfamiliar with the Symphony to make its acquaintance, for others whose attendance at regular season presentations has been desultory to renew an old enjoyment.

Primarily, the intent is entertainment and popularization of an orchestra that has been increasing its prestige with the years. In the longer run, it could lead to a broader Summer Festival.

To the talented and indefatigable Mr. Gati the community owes its thanks, as it does also to those who have helped him, including the sponsors, the city, the British Columbia Cultural Fund, the Canada Council and the Music Recording Trust Fund.

MAURICE WESTERN

Eying the Northern Road Map

OTTAWA — It is apparent from Don Jamieson's latest batch of press releases that we are on the threshold of an era of rail and road construction unmatched since the days of western settlement.

There has been much recent talk about this; not surprisingly in view of the government's expectation that pipelines will be built south through the Mackenzie corridor. Mr. Jamieson's announcements, and the appearance in summary of The Canadian Northwest Transportation Study, prepared by Hedlin Menzies and Associates, indicate that planning is more advanced than had been generally realized.

According to one statement, the federal government, in consultation with other governments including the province of British Columbia and the transportation industries, is "actively considering" upgrading and expanding the highway-and railway transportation systems in British Columbia and the Yukon over the next 10-year period.

Evidently, however, there is more to it than active consideration. For the same release observes that, with the increasing volumes of freight destined to move through West Coast ports and with major developments foreseen in the mineral and forest sectors of B.C. and the Yukon, many elements of the existing transportation network are considered to be inadequate to the needs of the 1970s and 1980s. Mr. Jamieson is then quoted as follows: "The federal government must assume a substantial role in ensuring that the upgrading and rationalization of northwestern transportation systems occur in time to meet these foreseen demands and needs."

Decision in Principle

This apparently means that there has been a decision in principle and that the "active consideration" has to do with the means of implementation.

The Hedlin-Menzies report was concerned with rail routes. It is dated November 1970. It considers five routes running northward from the CN line to Prince Rupert; each sweeping through Watson Lake and Ross River to a terminus at Dawson City. The conclusion was that all would yield benefits larger than estimated costs and that any one had the capability of becoming one of Canada's largest revenue freight resource railways.

It is of interest, however, that Mr. Jamieson has chosen neither of the routes most favored by the study group. The department's preference for a line running north from the Prince George region through Dease Lake and with eventual access to the Yukon is not explained. Evidently, however, the choice reflects considerations other than those in the report. One may be the decision to supplement the north-south line with a connecting link to the CNR near Prince Rupert.

The statement suggests another. "The federal government and the British Columbia government have been carrying out extensive consultations to rationalize railway development in the province and are exploring co-operatively the optimum use of present rail facilities and the building of new lines over the routes of greatest advantage to the region's development."

These consultations seem to have produced at least a general agreement. There is to be joint financing of the line with the federal government contributing not merely to the new road but also to portions already completed or now being built north of Fort St. James.

Mr. Jamieson also issued a series of announcements about highways. The Stewart-Cassiar road, being opened this fall, will be supplemented by links to Hazelton in the south and Whitehorse in the north. It is expected to be the principal artery for traffic to and from the Yukon and Alaska. As for the Alaska highway, it is to be improved and paved to Fort Nelson. At that point it will meet the Liard highway, to be extended to Fort Simpson on the Mackenzie highway, running north to the Arctic Ocean at Tuktoyaktuk. Not mentioned in the releases but already in construction is the Dempster highway, which will link the Dawson road with Mackenzie highway at Arctic Red River.

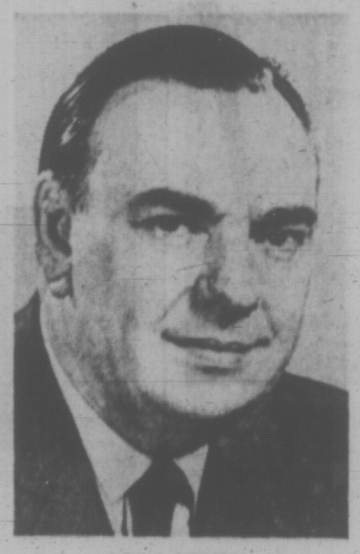
Also planned is a highway providing Whitehorse with access to Skagway. This will involve negotiations not only with British Columbia but also with the State of Alaska.

These projects obviously have important implications, both economic and political. If the Government is in earnest, as it most certainly appears to be, it plainly attaches great importance to resource development. Thus it would be quite inconsistent to pursue, at the same time, policies likely to discourage the resource industries.

On the political side, there may be problems not hinted at in the releases from Transport Canada. The federal Government has sole responsibility for roads in the Territories. With this presumably in mind, it is planning to assist the adjoining province of British Columbia in both rail and road construction. There is, however, no general federal-provincial program as there was, for example, with the Trans-Canada Highway and Roads to Resources.

It is arguable that the primary benefits of other government programs — regional development, for example — go to different parts of the country. Thus exception ought not to be taken if the federal government, to fulfil its northern obligations, plays a special role in British Columbia.

But the argument may be too general to be very effective. In fact, grievances have already been expressed in the House of Commons. Thus a Quebec member, Gerard Laprise of Abitibi not so long ago urged the Government to assist with an access road to the Villebois resources near James Bay. His case was based, in part, on sums being spent by Ottawa in the Territories.



DON JAMIESON

Provincial Jurisdiction

The rejoinder from Martin O'Connell, then parliamentary secretary to Mr. Marchand, was: "I should like to point out . . . that the building of roads comes mainly under provincial jurisdiction and that, according to the departmental terms of reference, financial help can only be granted for that kind of project if it comes within the framework of the special area program."

Not long afterwards a Manitoba member, Bud Simpson, devoted much of a speech in the Budget debate to a plea for a highway to Churchill.

These examples illustrate the nature of the problem. The easiest way to make a program acceptable is to make it general, as was the case with Roads to Resources. But this means, in effect, that the cost of the projects urgently needed — and which presumably inspired the program in the first place — becomes inflated by the addition of all sorts of other projects of doubtful urgency or none.

In other words the development foreshadowed by Mr. Jamieson will also have its political side. How far planning has proceeded in this respect we do not know. But there is that one, possibly significant reference, to consultations with "other governments," which suggests that as yet we may have been permitted to view only a part of the master plan for northern development.

ART STOTT

Tender From Abrasion

It is doubtful that Quebec artist Andre Gagnon would have played any better piano if the commentary accompanying his July 1 performance on Parliament Hill had been carried in English as well as French. Music is reasonably international, and the little black dots on the score are multi-lingual.

The tone of the questions and the criticisms voiced in and out of the Commons has, however, emphasized the unhappy trend intensified in Canada in the last year or two.

NDP Leader David Lewis, with little to lose politically in Quebec, has asked if the omission of an English script was deliberate. Other members have attacked the government with such effect that Prime Minister Trudeau has offered a public apology and fastened the goat tag on Gerard Pelletier, Secretary of State.

No one need be surprised by opposition members seizing any opportunity to score against the government. That's part of the game. Yet, to Pacific Coast and Western Canadian ears, the criticism seems to be gaining more credibility. A vast reservoir of goodwill to French-speaking Quebec — part of a recognition of the Canadian heritage — has been evaporating. A pollution of resentment is taking its place.

Old Animosities

Within living memory there have always been Canadians who have distrusted and disliked French Canadians. In earlier years their often malicious and unjust charges against the people of Quebec were a national embarrassment. If you were charitable, you tried to excuse their lack of understanding and found spiritual sustenance from the glowing Canadian history you were taught, lending glamor, adventure and high courage to the stories of Cartier, Champlain, Frontenac and those voyageurs who pressed on to the fur lands of the west. This was part of the stuff from which an enduring nation was formed.

More recently the ancient grudges held by some against Canadians who were of non-British origin and non-Protestant persuasion have been revealed in an uneasiness, growing to antagonism, in different areas. Partly, it seems to me, this has emerged as a reaction to Quebec demands and to the impression burgeoning in Western Canada, that federal authorities have met them too obsequiously. From the impression arise those too clever paraphrases of the theme that when Quebec sneezes, Ottawa relapses into pneumonia.

. . . tagged as goat

A multitude of arguments can be presented to reveal the fatuity of such smart-aleckism. But at least some of the arguments fuel the anti-Quebec hostilities.

The man in the street is intensifying his inclinations to express them in "letters to the editor." The intellectuals who, with a certain air of condescension, used to correct those who were mistaken, have assumed an unexpected silence. Probably it's time they did. Historic arguments on the mystique of Canadian nationhood based on the amalgam of French and British origins are increasingly shrugged off as tedious. And even the most logical of arguments are no defence against emotionalism. The so-called French fact has been crammed down the throats of non-French in this country to the point where it has become an emetic for many. They believe that they suffered overdoses in the no longer sweet Bi-and-Bi.

Early century Canadians — Canadians to the core — who have pledged themselves to defend to the last gasp their concept of a unified Canada, with the extension of what they consider legitimate concessions to Quebec, are running short of breath.

No one in his right mind identifies the murder of Pierre Laporte and the kidnapping of James Cross with the aspirations of Canadians of French origin who fervently seek advancement for their own people. But their position isn't improved by Quebec public figures who, decrying such tactics, freely express their understanding of the impulse which caused such crimes.

Rubbed Raw

It seems to me that non-French sensibilities have been rubbed raw by unnecessary abrasions. Mountains of good will have been sacrificed by pinpricks of negligible significance — changes in names that are taken as affronts to supporters of old traditions in the country. The sensitivities, in my opinion, are too tender. But the reaction is predictable.

So a piano performance is given on Parliament Hill and the commentary there is in French only. Not surprising that the incident should be seized upon by opponents of the government. Dismaying, nevertheless, that enlargement of this molehill into a mountain should apparently be so acceptable to so many non-Francophones.

Common sense dictates that we shrug the whole thing off, honor the apology made by the Prime Minister, note that he has placed a name on the man responsible for what he calls a mistake — and most people will, in the current vernacular, call a boob, and recognize the backlash from the preachments of too many defenders of Canada who have leaned over backward to enlighten all Canadians on the French fact.

With friends like these . . . ?

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

It is seed-time for a great many of our plants and a time of challenge to identify them as we walk the trails.

Look closely on the ground in the open, sunny places, and then again in the deep shade, for these factors have a bearing on the type of seed that you can find.

In the grasses you may pick out the bird's head and beak of the storksbill. It is possible that you will find blossoms as well. This is one of the plants that belong to the geranium family.

There are many members of the composite family that have a parachute-like arrangement to carry them on the wind. The dandelion and the oyster plant are good examples.

The lily family yields flowers such as the erythronium, tiger lily, camas and others. In them the seed capsules are three-sided. The shooting star or peacock will have a cup-like pod that looks like a fancy goblet or urn.

The buttercup family have clusters of burr-like balls on the end of their slender branches.

The sweet cicely has seeds that are dart-like and will penetrate your clothes. As a rule you have to push them on through the fabric to remove them. Other types of "hitch-hikers" are the bedstraws, with their tiny black seeds covered with minute hooks. The burdocks act the same way, while the curly dock has seed capsules that look like miniature dried-up corn flakes.

Perhaps one of the largest groups are the mustards, including our garden radishes. Most of this family have tiny black balls and some of the seeds are so fine that they look like dust.

The seed pods of the coral roots hang like Chinese lanterns on a stalk. Like those of the rest of the orchid family, the seeds are dust-like.

Take a look at a "dried-up" clover flower and you'll see that the seeds are almost microscopic.

Plants have a variety of methods of seed dispersal, some by the wind, others by birds, insects and animals, some by gravity, and a few by a form of mechanical explosion. Some seeds are round, others hooked, and some have beaks or wings.

Far more seeds are produced than could survive if all were to germinate, but it is the strong that survive in order that the plants may produce strong and healthy offspring.

Wall St. Bars Door to McGovern

By TERRY ROBARDS
The New York Times

Sen. George McGovern's economic policies have aroused great controversy in Wall Street, seriously jeopardizing some of the sources of campaign funds that have traditionally been available in the financial community for liberal candidates.

Wall Street leaders who have directed fund-raising efforts for Democratic office-seekers in the past are virtually unanimous in opposing the South Dakotan. Some say they will back no presidential candidate financially if McGovern is the Democratic nominee. Others say they will shift their support to Nixon.

The term "McGovernomics" is frequently used in a jocular sense to describe McGovern's policies for income redistribution, welfare reform and changes in the nation's tax structure. The word crops up repeatedly in investment advisory reports issued by brokerage houses.

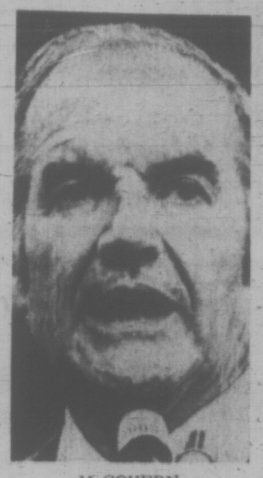
The increasing probability in the last month that the senator would win his party's presidential nomination at the Democratic national convention is widely believed to have been one factor in the stock market's recent weakness.

Perhaps even more significantly, the investment community's reluctance to support McGovern could have an impact outside Wall Street. Financial men have entry into executive suites throughout American industry and rarely hesitate to use them in drumming up campaign contributions.

Herbert Alexander, director of the Citizens' Research Foundation and a leading authority on campaign financing, estimated that 10 to 20 per cent of the spending on behalf of the Democratic presidential ticket probably could be traced directly to Wall Street.



McGOVERN
. . . economics suspect

He had no breakdown, but suggested that the total could easily run into the millions of dollars. "Their impact is greater," he said, "because they're influential in many ways. They get around the country, they sit on boards of directors and they are involved in philanthropies."

The antipathy to McGovern, moreover, is reported to be making it easier to raise money for President Nixon. Past contributors to liberal candidates have in some cases indicated they now will help finance the president's campaign.

Wall Street is especially uneasy over McGovern's proposals — some of which he has modified — to impose excess profits taxes on corporations, grant $1,000 a person to every citizen to help families earning up to $12,000 a year, curtail defence spending sharply, change the tax status of municipal bonds and tax inheritances above $500,000 at 77 per cent.

If implemented, the critics say, such a program would throw the economy into recession, stifle individual initiative and prove too costly to finance. Moreover, they are frightened by what they consider a lack of deep analysis behind the proposals.

Interviews over the last two weeks with numerous financial leaders failed to turn up any indications of significant Wall Street support for the McGovern candidacy. No major Wall Street figure indicated a willingness to lend his name and prestige to a McGovern fund-raising effort.

Between now and election day, of course, much greater financial support for McGovern could materialize. But apparently it will not come from any of Wall Street's best-known people.

Gustave Levy, senior partner of Goldman, Sachs Co. and a past chairman of the governing board of the Stock Exchange, said, "We think very ill of him. We don't think he knows what he's talking about. We're scared to death of him."

Levy, one of Wall Street's most influential men, is a Nixon fund-raiser. "Financially," he said, "it's going to make our job of raising money for Nixon a lot easier."

Campaign financial reports indicate that Levy has in the past contributed both to Republican and Democratic candidates, a hedging practice followed by many Wall Streeters. This time he is strictly a Nixon man.

John Loeb, another leading figure in Wall Street, said, "Frankly, his economic policies bother me." Loeb was chairman of a committee that raised money for Humphrey in 1968.

This time he is not sure what he'll do, although he has already supported first Sen. Muskie and later Humphrey against McGovern in the primaries. "Uncertainty always bothers the Wall Street community and certainly we have plenty of it with McGovern," he said.

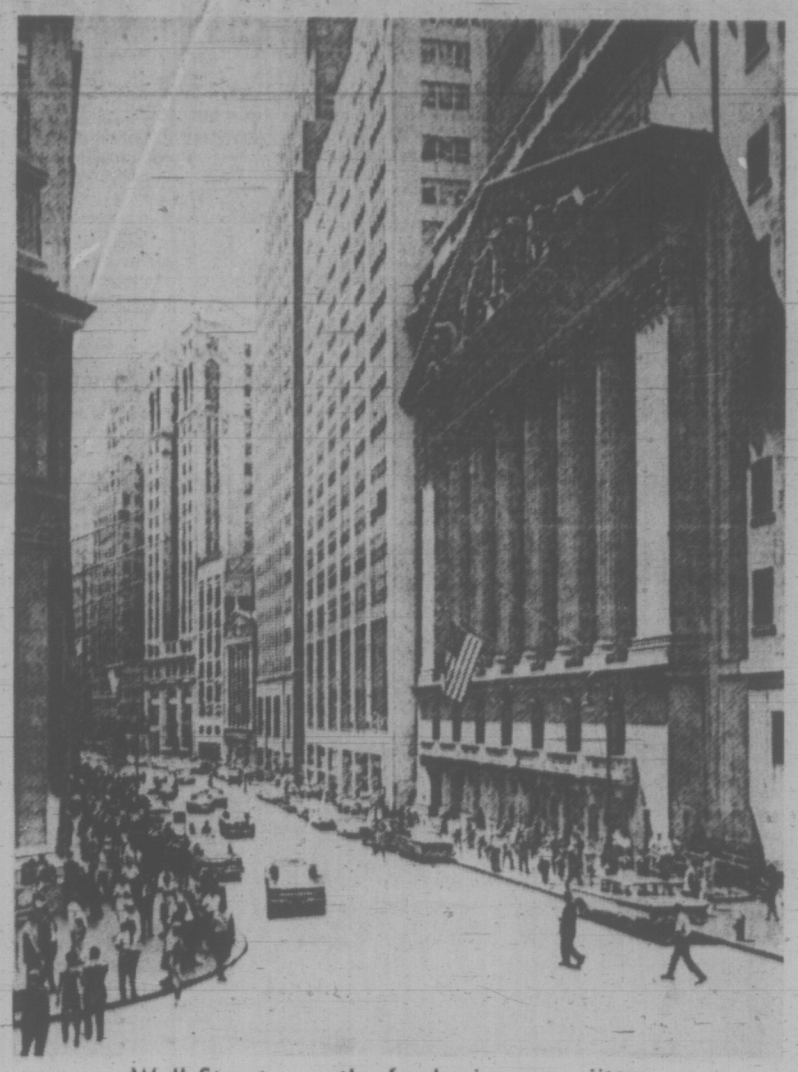
"One of the important things in the U.S. that's made a lot of things possible is prosperous business. McGovern's policies as I see them would be a body blow to that. I'm not sure he even knows what his policies are himself."

"I think McGovern's proposals — if I understand them — would be a disaster for the country and a disaster for the market if he's elected," said Ralph Denunzio, the present chairman of Board of governors of the Stock Exchange.

James Davant, chairman of Paine, Webber, Jackson Curtis, quipped, "I'm not sure I can say anything you could print about McGovern. But I think that anyone with property has got to be somewhat concerned by him, not just people in the market.

"If he wins, I think I'd like to have my assets somewhere else — in another country."



Wall Street . . . the fund-raisers are jittery.

The Realities Of Party Politics

By DALTON CAMP

Political journalists, I have sometimes suspected, are frustrated seismologists, eternally fascinated by the fissures and faults in political parties of the sort that create earthquakes and topple leaders. So it is that the media have engaged themselves in probing and pondering the potential effect of the Waffle upon the NDP.

It has been said to me that, to a considerable degree, the Waffle is the creation of the media which gave to it such prominence that it was converted from a nuisance to the leadership of a threat to its continuance. Conflict, after all, makes better news than harmony, and the more copy and prominence the media gave to the Waffle, the more contentious Professor Watkins, James Laxer, and their followers became.

Emboldened by their own press just as the party was outraged by it, the Wafflers overestimated their strength and, more serious, they would seem to have forgotten the essential nature of a political party — any party — including their own.

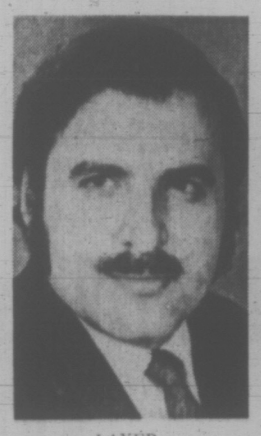
The parties in our system are fundamentally coalitions of interest groups who manage to maintain some degree of equilibrium and stability by a conscious effort to form consensus from among varying attitudes and to reconcile differences through the instrumentality of the majority will. The Waffle group appear to believe consensus is simply another word for sell-out, and majority rule is mere tyranny.

Such indifference to political realities led to their calculated isolation within the party, choosing their own leaders, holding their own caucus meetings, proclaiming their own policy, even nominating their own candidates.

There is nothing much wrong with doing so, except they were using the NDP as their platform and vehicle, all the while opposing its leadership and the majority of its members. There is, surely, a difference between independence of mind and a deliberative insurgency.

Put another way, Professor Watkins would be back teaching at Varsity, and the Waffle would only be something on the breakfast menu, were it not for the fact that it was a part of the NDP — or claimed to be.

But there does not seem to be any profit in allowing a national party to be used as a convenience for a rump of ideologues. Thus, the majority decision to expell the Waffle movement seemed not only sensible but obvious. To do otherwise would have made the NDP into an external debating society in which nothing could ever be decided without unanimous consent.



LAXER

. . . emboldened by press attention

Certainly, as the Waffle came to be increasingly identified with the NDP, the majority of the party and its leadership were in danger of becoming hostages to an ideological minority which had neither responsibility nor authority but which did have a growing capability for disruptive publicity and propaganda.

Some have sought to justify the existence of the Waffle by comparing it to the Fabian Society which influenced the politics of Britain early in the century. Somehow, James Laxer — and I mean him no disrespect — does not look to me like a latter-day Sydney Webb. And even though the Fabians enjoyed a more effective influence in Labor Party circles, nevertheless they proseyltized in all parties, seeking support not for dogma but for policy.

The Waffle group was something more, or less, than a body of organized dissent. It was on its way to being an organized conspiracy against the party, not only in Ontario, but elsewhere in the country.

In the last analysis, what the Waffle wanted, and schemed to get, was a measure of influence and power in the party greater than its strength of numbers would warrant. No one should blame them for trying, I suppose, but no one should consider their failure to be a negation of democracy either.

All in all, it is a text-book example of the interior realities of party politics, perhaps the more salutary and satisfying because it demonstrates the fact that the NDP, like the Tories and the Grits, is a party like any other, after all.

The maxim is demonstrated and reproven that minority dissent within a party will be tolerated by the majority only to the point where the cost of enduring it remains less than the price of repudiating it and, further, that dissidents may be tolerated so long as they do not threaten the fundamental interests of the majority.

We had been led to believe that the NDP was, somehow, different, more tolerant of dissent, and less likely, when disturbed, to devour its young. Not so, it seems.

Canada Laying on Lavish Show In Bid for Trade With China

By JOHN BURNS
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — A little more than six weeks from now more than 600 Canadians will descend on Peking for what promises to be the grandest show that foreigners have mounted in China since the bad old days in Shanghai.

At a cost to the taxpayer that will probably run over $2 million, the Canadians will lay on a mini-Expo that will combine a massive trade fair with film shows, basketball matches and figure-skating on plastic ice.

Presiding over it all will be External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, who will travel to China on a ministerial exchange that will see the Chinese trade minister, Pai Hsiang-Kuo, journeying to Toronto to open a Chinese exhibit at this year's Canadian National Exhibition.

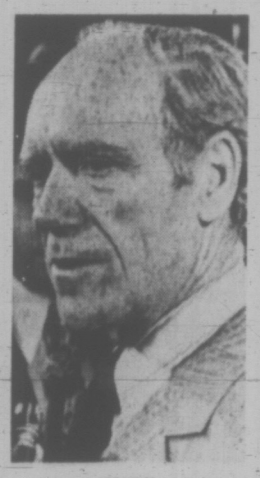
Mr. Pai, a lithe, crewcut man with a face that looks as though it were cut from Mount Rushmore, will be the first Chinese minister even to visit Canada. Mr. Sharp, who was preceded to China last year by Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, will nonetheless be the highest Canadian official ever to visit Peking.

The external affairs minister will open the 13-day trade fair in a grand ceremony at the Russian-style exhibition hall in Peking's northern suburbs on Aug. 21. Other details of his visit have not yet been determined but it is considered certain that he will hold talks with Chinese leaders including Premier Chou Enlai.

The fair will be a bonanza for the Canadian news media too, with the Chinese admitting the largest press party ever to come here from Canada. Final numbers have not yet been settled but they are certain to exceed the dozen or so who came here last year with Mr. Pepin.

Despite continuing doubts among Western diplomats here as to the value of large one-country trade fairs in China, the Canadian effort will be easily the biggest, as well as the most expensive, that any country has ever organized here.

More than 599 Canadian businessmen and technicians will be on hand to man the exhibits of the 225 firms which have signed up for the fair.



SHARP
. . . he'll preside

Each of the firms will receive some final assistance from the federal government, which is putting more money into the fair than it has ever before put into a trade display overseas.

By comparison the existing record holders for Peking fairs, the Swedes, had about 499 men and 147 firms at their display in April. Privately, diplomats estimate the cost of that fair to have been in the neighborhood of $1 million. The Swedes were less successful than they had hoped, meaning that they tied up fewer orders and sold less of the equipment displayed than they had hoped. But nobody here would say that their display was a failure, because fair organizers — whether Swedish, Canadian or Rumanian — refuse to accept immediate sales as a fair test of success.

Rather they regard the fairs as an opportunity to impress the Chinese with the range and quality of their country's products in the hope that the Chinese will turn to them when the time to place substantial orders comes. This is necessarily a long-term process.

Some misgivings were expressed at the highest level in Ottawa before the decision to mount such a major effort was taken. But those who argued the long-run benefits eventually prevailed over those who suggested that the money could be better spent elsewhere or in a different fashion.

Undoubtedly political considerations played a major part. As the beneficiary of a decade of gigantic trade surpluses with China and as a newly-accredited country anxious to create good will among the decision-makers in Peking, Canada felt it had an obligation to match the efforts of other Western countries that had planned major exhibitions.

The lure of the Chinese market also played its part, although most Canadians with experience in the China trade are coming around to the view that sales of manufactured goods will remain relatively modest for some years to come.

Given the continuing Chinese insistence on self-reliance and the concomitant determination to keep the nations foreign trade account within strict limits, the outlook now is for considerably slower growth in the China trade than some of the experts were forecasting only last year.

For Canada the objective now is not so much the massive breakthrough conjured up by the optimists of yesteryear as the steady expansion of that small fraction of Canadian sales to China that is now accounted for by manufactured goods.

Until now the story of Canadian trade with China has been almost all wheat, with wheat accounting for nearly 90 per cent of last year's sales total of approximately $299 million. At the trade fair Canadian manufacturers will be trying to persuade the Chinese to think of Canada as a market for industrial products too.

What's the Hurry?

By TREVOR LAUTENS
The Sun

Canada Day has come and gone. This puts one in mind of Sir John A. Macdonald. He was known as "Old Tomorrow." He was a master of delay. And why not?

Everything should be put off for as long as possible. Indecision ought to be, if it is not already, the national characteristic. If you must do something, do little. But do it with style. As Katharine Whitehorn wittily wrote recently, "Participation is the thief of time."

A sad case presented itself to me recently. It involves a comely young woman and an aging man. They are agreeable companions. They are as lighthearted as children. "You either want to marry me or you don't," she said abruptly. Why? Life will never be better for them than it is now. Why this terrible either-or, this demand for action? It must be to quote myself, that a woman would rather be married than be happy.

The old British colonies grew, or grew up, in an atmosphere of benign neglect. Colonial secretaries nodded over their quill pens and whle countries, like Canada, quietly tiptoed away from under them. Only when the clerks awoke, as they did from time to time, did the British behave foolishly. Things went well under Lord Melbourne, the most notorious do-nothing leader ("why can't you leave it alone?" in history; it was Churchill, imperiously stamping orders "Action This Day" and vowing he had not become the king's first minister to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire, who did so.

If only the Russians could fall asleep over East Europe; if only the handsome blonde Americans would drag off their IT&T meddlers and snoopers and let Mr. Allende, president of Chile, get on with his work, wise or idiotic.

"L'audace, toujours l'and ace!" cried Frederick the Great, a phrase, if you saw the movie, that Gen Patton loved to quote, "Le nap, toujours le nap," say I.

Wisdom is in knowing what to work hard at and what to fall asleep over. This country, for example, is clearly impossible, always has been. It was impossible in 1867. It has been impossible for 105 years. What keeps it going is its comfortable impossibility which no one has bothered to correct.

The Fathers of Confederation were magnificently, gorgeously illogical. Logic said such a country couldn't survive; belief, a suspension of reason in favor of a workable illusion, allowed it to do so. Those who demand "action" from the endless and admirably indecisive federal-provincial conferences are in effect demanding the break-up of the country.

The danger of Rene Levesque and others of similar mind is not that they are wrong, but that they are narrowly right. The operative word is "narrowly". Mr. Levesque has the logic. So did Pyrrhus have the victory.

To return to Sir, John A., who did so much to make it all possible, he was himself a kind of postponement. He was a hard-drinking eighteenth-century figure lingering in the nineteenth century. "He should have lived," historian Donald Creighton quotes the colonial secretary, Lord Kimberley, "in the good old times of two-bottle men." No doubt he intended to change his ways. But there was always tomorrow.

Good old delay! No doubt this column would more appropriately have appeared before July 1. But it seemed only right that I put it off.

Israel-Jordan Border Blurs, Lasting Peace Eyed

BETHLEHEM, Occupied Jordan (AP) — Five years after Israel's victory over the Arabs, the old border between Jordan and Israel had, in effect, vanished.

New roads, signposted in Hebrew, Arabic and English, connect the Israeli-held west bank of Jordan to the main Jewish cities.

Thousands of Arab tourists pour into the metropolitan bustle of Tel Aviv. Urban Israelis picnic in the rustic west bank.

Forty thousand Arabs cross into Israel every day to work at construction sites and factories. They need no permits, although Israeli police may check identity cards.

The Jordan River, which became a ceasefire line after Israel reached its bank in the 1967 fighting, is peaceful.

Jerusalem's political thinkers feel that perhaps there is a chance for peace between Israel and at least one of its Arab adversaries.

West bank Arabs, always sensitive to the slightest sign of a solution to their plight, spend hours debating what kind of peace settlement they can expect from Jordan and Israel.

PEACE SOON

Elias Freij, Bethlehem's Arab mayor, believes peace is only one year away.

"The Israelis will soon approve the Hussein plan," he says, referring to King Hussein's proposal for a Palestinian province in the west bank, federated under his Jordanian throne.

Jerusalem officially rejected the plan. But Freij — and some Israelis — see this as a tactic to forestall Arab charges that Amman and Jerusalem together plotted a Palestinian sellout.

The West bank is a fertile, mountainous bulge of territroty with a population of 623,000. Under Jordanian rule, its frontier was a twisting line that was the bane of Israeli military stragetists. In places the line cut deep into Israel, suggesting that the Jewish state could be cut in half by an invading army.

In the 1967 war, Israel pushed the line back 50 miles to the Jordan River, making it remote, straight, and easy to defend. The occupied zone, between the old line and the river, became a sort of test tube for co-existence.

OPEN BRIDGES

Jordan has opened its river bridges to foreign tourists coming to and from Israel. Israelis cannot cross the bridges, however. For five summer months a year Jordanians may visit kinfolk in Israel and the west bank.

Last March Israel organized municipal elections in the west bank, and 85 per cent of voters turned out in 23 Arab towns. Jordan protested that the elections were a plot to install a Quisling leadership in the west bank, but now indicates it will recognize the new mayors.

Rubber Making Desert Bloom

SOUTHAMPTON, England (CP) — Making the desert bloom has long been one of the cliches of the language but now an experiment aimed at that goal is coming to a successful conclusion.

A stretch of Libyan sand dunes was sprayed with a rubbery liquid in the spring of 1971 and now a stand of eucalyptus trees is flourishing there.

Last April the area was sprayed with a half-inch-thick coating of a milky blend of rubber latex and mineral oil, perfected and patented by International Synthetic Rubber. The sticky liquid held sand particles together, enabling the 60,000 eucalyptus saplings which had previously been planted to grow successfully and to become established. When the oil and rubber coating disappears the sand-laden winds will not be able to tear up the trees. If there are good rains this winter they should grow to five feet or more by the summer of 1972.

For several centuries wind-blown sand from the Sahara Desert has been steadily encroaching on thin strips of agricultural land on the coast of the Mediterranean, aided a long time ago by the introduction of the goat, which devoured the grasses and shrubs that stablized the sand.

IDEA NOT NEW

The idea of holding the shifting dunes together long enough to allow trees to become re-established is far from new; International Synthetic has been experimenting with it for at least eight years. So have several other firms, but no sand-stabilizing formulation has, apparently, approached the efficiency of Unisol 91.

The compound remains on the surface between eight months and a year before complete disintegration. By this time, as this 400-acre experiment is conclusively showing, the trees have formed sufficient roots to secure themselves against winds.

Saplings planted in this way will not only act as a barrier against winds but help to cultivate the desert by depositing rotting plant material as their leaves fall. Trees are being first used in these experiments because they can be planted deep enough to take advantage of the water which is to be found often only about two feet below the surface of the desert. But dune grasses will certainly eventually be used in the same way the ultimately various crops may be planted on areas stablized with Unisol.

RAIN SUFFICIENT

Once the sand has been stablized in this way in desert areas, the rainfall is frequently just sufficient to support the growth of trees even without artificial irrigation, and the trees themselves tend to trap and hold moisture.

The light liquid can even be easily sprayed from a one-man back pack on a small one-acre plot of land.

Cost of the process varies. An average might be around $250 an acre but assistance schemes could bring this down enormously for small farmers. Concerns in several countries includng some in the Middle East, Spain, Mexico and Australia now are showing interest in manufacturing the liquid under licence.

International Synthetic Rubber Company, which is jointly owned by the Avon, Dunlop, Firestone, Goodyear, Michelin, Pirelli and Uniroyal companies and has its headquarters here, is already discussing the possibility of another project to cover 60,000 acres in Libya.

Small scale research projects have already shown that oil-stablized soils can grow crops including carrots, onions, lettuce, turnips and radishes, commonly thought of as temperate-zone crops.

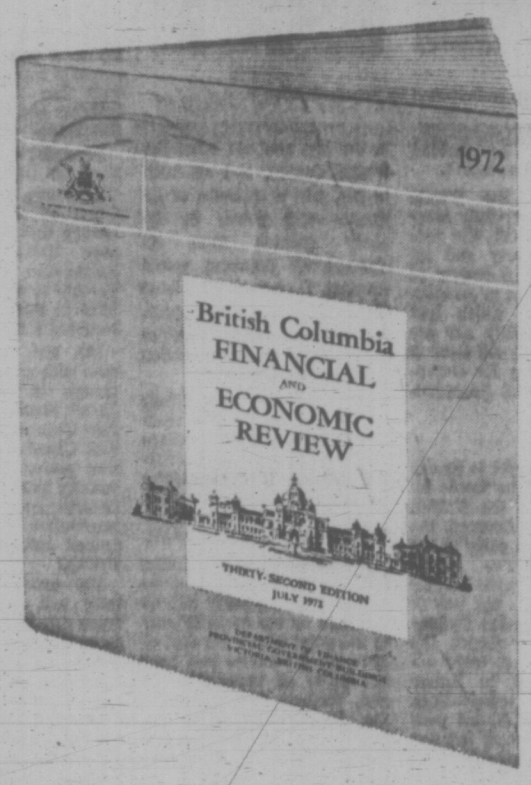
Read all about the best economic record in Canada



The greatest growth in industrial production . . . the biggest surge in retail sales . . . the best record in creating new job opportunities. These were but a few of British Columbia's pace-setting economic achievements during the past year – achievements you can read about in detail in the current issue of the British Columbia Financial and Economic Review. This publication is filled with facts and figures relating to every aspect of economic activity in our province, from the continued extension of the British Columbia Railway into our far north country to the growth of individual industries in every corner of the province.

Our outstanding economic record was reported in the May 31st Bank of Montreal Business Review, which stated: "While the economic upswing which occurred in the nation as a whole last year was reflected in the patterns of growth in all of the major regions, there can be little doubt that the recovery was strongest in British Columbia."

Witchcraft Publicity Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Pioneer, a religious magazine of the 226,000-member Reformed Church in Canada, has criticized Imperial Oil Ltd. for using a booklet on witchcraft as a sales-promotion gimmick.

Imperial Oil has offered customers at Esso stations a number of free booklets, including one on witchcraft.

Rev. John J. Opmeer, minister of the Hope Reformed Church in Vancouver, wrote in Pioneer that Imperial "in its efforts to promote sales has reached beyond the unusual and entered a domain which is particularly offensive to Christians."

Mr. Opmeer said he is sure Esso executives intended the booklet "as a joke," but "occultism and witchcraft are serious business."

D. G. Twaits, advertising and promotion manager for Imperial Oil, said Thursday several million of the booklets have been distributed in Canada. Criticism had been minimal.

"I assume the majority of people who have complained are evangelical church-groups," he said. "They believe that all witchcraft is evil. We respect that belief and apologize for offending them."

The promotion campaign now is almost finished. Mr. Twaits said if Imperial had realized beforehand the "sensitivity" of some groups to the topic, the company probably would not have issued the witchcraft booklet.

Young Pot-Smokers Cleared

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Literary critic Leslie Fiedler and his wife Margaret committed no crime when they let their children smoke marijuana in an upstairs bedroom, New York's highest court has ruled.

In a 5-to-2 decision Thursday, the Court of Appeals threw out the convictions on charges of allowing the use of marijuana in their home.

The charges resulted from a raid by police on their home April 27, 1967. Officers said they found marijuana and hashish in two upstairs rooms.

Five other persons, including two of the Fiedlers' sons and a daughter-in-law, were arrested. Their cases were resolved long ago by fines and probation.

Fiedler, an English professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo, is a noted critic and author of Love and Death in the American Novel, a textbook in many U.S. college courses.

In the majority opinion, Justice James Gibson said: "It is clear from the record that no crime was charged or proven."

Fiedler did admit that he knew that marijuana was being used, Gibson said, "but nothing in section 1533 makes this a crime."

That section of the law makes it illegal to maintain a place for the use of drugs. "It was never contemplated that criminal taint would attach to a family home should members of the family on one occasion smoke marijuana or hashish there," Gibson wrote.

Dissenting were Justices John Scileppi and Matthew Jasen.

Scileppi argued that the convictions should stand. "The defendants' crime was knowing of illegal drug activity in their home and doing nothing to prevent or avoid it, and in condoning its use therein."

Study Grant Insufficient

MONTREAL (CP) — Xavier Moro, a 17-year-old student from Madrid, says everyone tells him he is crazy to try to get to the Arctic community of Igloolik on $140.

Immigration officers at Montreal International Airport and friends back in Spain have been among those commenting on his mental health. But he is undeterred and plans to leave next week to study the culture of Canadian Eskimos.

The adventure began last winter when Xavier was among 200 students attending French government schools who received a Bourse Zellidja. The grant, totalling $140, is to be used on a project which must be carried out alone and usually abroad.

Xavier, whose father works for an airline in Madrid, chose Igloolik as his research spot and encountered serious opposition only when he arrived here last week.

Immigration officials, dismayed by the small amount of cash he had, considered sending him back to Spain. But after Xavier explained the terms of his scholarship, they recommended the YMCA and he hitchhiked downtown to register.

At present, he says, he hasn't the faintest idea of how to get to Igloolik "but I am sure I will." Once there, he hopes family friends will offer bed and board.

If his report on Eskimos is satisfactory, he will be eligible for another grant next year. Xavier's 1973 target is Indian tribes along the Orinoco River in Venezuela.

Inquest Adjourned

Victoria coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said today an inquest into the death of Mrs. Joan Tanner, 47, of 2174 Bartlett which began Friday at McCall's funeral chapel, has been adjourned to July 12.

Mrs. Tanner was the driver of a car involved in a two-car collision at Kenmore and Torquay on Monday.

Oil Critics 'Faddists'

CALGARY (CP) — Opponents of northern oil development are anti-pollution fanatics and faddists, according to vice-president R. G. S. Currie of Panarctic Oils Ltd.

"I deplore the emotionalism, the half-truths, the doomsday statements which are aired too loudly nowadays," he told the National Jacyees convention.

"Twenty years ago people would have been elated by the northern oil finds. I deplore deliberate exploitation by fanatics and charlatans of the environment issue."

Submersible Jobs Difficult to Float

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — On the office wall at Arctic Marine Ltd. is a clipping from a Los Angeles newspaper with a headline which poses the question: Are submersibles a sinking business?

The article tells how submersible projects have been scrapped and several existing machines laid up through the United States.

"The trouble is, that story is correct, damn it," says Robert Bradley, president of Arctic Marine. "Building a submersible is like building a hammer before you've invented the nail.

"We've got the tool, now we need things to use it on."

Arctic Marine is a neighbor to International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd. whose planned sale of a submersible to Russia fell through as a result of United States government pressure on Ottawa. The U.S. had a say because some of the parts for Hyco's machine were made in the U.S.

Mr. Bradley, a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and San Diego State College, is trying to think of ways of promoting the Sea Otter, a 13½-foot, 6,300-pound submersible that can take two people to a depth of 1,500 feet.

The Sea Otter went down for the first time in January and has since done a major salmon research job for the federal environment protection service. Since then, it has been sitting on a trailer waiting for an assignment.

"We've got the only submersible in the Pacific Northwest available for hire," said Mr. Bradley. "But people don't beat a path to your door."

"The trouble is that we are in the operating end. We can build and operate a submersible, but we don't know much about selling."

The kind of services Sea Otter is capable of, at "never more than" $1,500 a day, include surveys of the ocean floor for oil well drilling sites, working on well construction and maintenance, doing similar work for pipelines, cable inspection, salvage and undersea photography.

'How You Do It' Is Tax Trap

• YOUR TAXES •

By I. H. ASPER

It's not what you do, it's how you do it that determines how much tax you pay. This lesson is too frequently learned the hard way by taxpayers.

The basic reasoning behind this principle of tax law is that since there are an infinite number of possible situations, the income tax law could be endless if it attempted to provide rules for each potential transaction. Instead the law is specific rather than general.

It will say that if one makes such and such a transaction, he will be taxed but if he does not come within the letter, not the spirit, of the law he will escape the tax.

Thus, before embarking on a transaction, one should always determine in advance what the tax effect may be. Often he will find there is more than one way to accomplish the same result but one method will produce a lower tax cost. Obviously, all things being relatively equal, he will choose that path.

For example, if a man owns a business and his wife works for him and earns a salary, her remuneration is not deductible because the income tax act specifically prohibits this kind of deduction. However, the man can accomplish the same result and obtain the tax benefit of deducting her salary by incorporating his business and having the corporation pay her salary. Now it is deductible.

Each year there are more disgruntled taxpayers who have fallen into one or another kind of tax trap. They have done something that makes them taxable, which if done another way would have left them tax-free. Usually the courts are powerless to assist them.

An example of this kind of situation was dealt with in a case before the tax appeal board.

The case turned on the question of whether or not two corporations were "associated" for tax purposes. Two companies are considered to be associated under several kinds of circumstances, all set out in the law. For the purpose of this case, the applicable law is that the two companies will be associated if they are controlled by the same person.

When the law declared two companies to be associated, they are required to lump their income together for tax calculations. This can produce a tax of over $12,000 per year more than they would pay if they were not considered "associated corporation". For obvious tax reasons, associated status is something to be avoided.

The case before the board involved two Ontario companies. One was owned by one man, call him Smith. The other was owned equally by Smith and another man, call him Jones. At this stage the two companies were not associated because while one was controlled by Smith, he did not control the other since he had only a 50-per-cent not a 51-per-cent voting position.

In 1964, the company owned by Smith and Jones needed more working capital. Smith arranged a line of credit from major suppliers. He also arranged for someone to lend the company an additional $200,000. At the financiers' insistence, Smith personally guaranteed the obligation of the company.

When he was forced to guarantee for the company, he wanted to control its affairs until he was released for the liability he had assumed. This quite frequently occurs in private companies.

As a result, Smith and Jones entered into a written agreement providing that one extra share would be transferred to Smith, giving him control of the company. It was agreed that when the company had paid off the debts that Smith had guaranteed, the extra share would be released and the original 50-50 position would be restored.

At this point, Smith controlled his own company as well as the other, so they were legally associated, and the revenue department assessed the extra tax.

Smith resisted the assessment relying on an exempting provision in the act. The exemption provides, among other things, that where someone has acquired control of a corporation to protect a loan he has made to the corporation, and the arrangement is to last only until he has been repaid, then the associated status will not take effect. This was designed to allow lenders to take shares as security for loans, without inadvertently incurring tax penalties.

However, the assistant board chairman, R. S. W. Fordham, dismissed the appeal. He pointed out that any law that exempts one from tax must be followed literally. The exemption Smith relied upon is there to protect lenders or creditors of a company.

But Smith was netiher; he was a guarantor and in tax law that is something else. The protection does not extend to guarantors and in the result the extra tax had to be paid.

(Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer and leader of the Manitoba Liberal party.)

Delta Plans Calgary Inn

VANCOUVER (CP) — Delta Hotels Ltd., the Vancouver-based hotel chain, has announced it will build a $3.5 million hotel at Calgary International Airport starting in the spring of 1973.

William Pattison, Delta president, said Calgary Airport Inn will have 144 rooms and suites and will be built on 10 acres of landscaped property.

It will have a health club, swimming pools and a convention centre.

The hotel will be part of an 80-acre shopping-accommodation-recreation complex to be built by Stellar Enterprises Ltd. of Calgary.

QUEBEC (CP) — A massive fiscal reform bill designed to overhaul Quebec tax laws to make them conform to federal legislation adopted in January was passed by the national assembly Thursday.

IRA Arms Supply Lines Sought

LONDON (AP) — British investigators have established that arms and funds are reaching the Irish Republican Army mainly from U.S. and European sources, including Britain itself.

To stop the flow of money and arms to the IRA the British government has sought the help of such countries as the United States, Japan, Canada, the Irish Republic and even, on one occasion, Czechoslovakia.

Gun-running by definition, is an underground operation. Consequently just about every government approached has stressed that its capacity to control this sort of traffic is limited, officials say.

Britain has repeatedly asked the United States — and Japan to track down and halt leakages of a high-velocity rifle to the IRA for use in Northern Ireland.

ORDERED CLOSE CHECK

The defence ministry says the government has turned up no evidence to show Libya is sending in weapons. The Libyan leader, Mummar Kadafi, drew a British protest when he claimed Libya is sending money, arms and volunteers to back up the struggle of the Irish revolutioaries against what he called British imperialism.

Prime Minister Edward Heath's government ordered its security forces in Ulster to doublecheck whether arms from Libya were filtering into IRA hands.

By comparing records of British arms shipments to Libya with material captured from IRA men, and after exhaustive intelligence inquiries, the British government concluded Kadafi had been boasting, carried away perhaps by a wish to portray himself as a champion of Arab nationalism.

Since the 1969 insurrection began, British diplomatic mission abroad have been on the alert for evidence of IRA fund-raising and arms-buying.

The authorities here say the thickest dossiers on this subject relate to the activities of IRA sympathizers in the United States, and to the passage of arms through the Irish republic.

During the last month or so Britain has been perturbed over a powerful new high-velocity rifle in IRA hands. This is the Armalite —or AR-180, perhaps the deadliest light rifle.

It is being made under licence in Japan for the Armalite Corp. of Costa Mesa, Calif. Officially, just about the entire output is supposed to be shipped back to the United States, where the gas-operated rifle is sold as a sporting gun.

Ten of these rifles have been captured from the IRA or found on the streets of Belfast and Londonderry.

U.S. officials and the Japanese government have been embarrassed, the British say, and are seeking to stop leakages. But with the weapon said to be on open sale in U.S. cities it seems IRA agents are having no trouble in getting hold of them.

N.S. Police Under Fire

HALIFAX (CP) — Tales of crime-busting battles between cops and robbers are playing second fiddle to debates on the effectiveness of policing operations in some Nova Scotia towns.

One police department has been warned to "shape up or ship out," another may be replaced by RCMP, one police chief is behind bars, another faces criminal charges, and some towns have hired constables from private security agencies to assist local police patrols.

I. G. MacLeod, Nova Scotia's deputy attorney-general, believes the dilemma is a financial one. If cities and towns are willing to pay only a certain amount for police services then "people of a certain level" are attracted, he says.

Joe Ross, a former motorcycle patrolman with the Halifax police department and director of the Police Association of Nova Scotia, says towns can expect only poor services from "cheap labor."

He said municipalities must be willing to pay the price for adequate police forces.

STRIKE OVER PAY

The controversy came to a head in the southwestern town of Yarmouth earlier this week where the 10-man police force ended a six-day strike by accepting a new one-year wage contract, but not before agreeing to establishment of a committee to study methods of improving operations of the police department.

Fred Emin, mayor of the town of 9,000, said he opposed the wage agreement because he felt the force had fallen down in its duties.

"It wasn't a question of money. . . . I opposed the agreement because I felt the force should improve itself before getting a raise," the mayor said.

Mr. Ross says "the onus now is on the force, either to shape up or ship out. They have six months to improve themselves or they're gone."

Antigonish council has asked the attorney-general's department for RCMP to patrol the town of 5,000. The seven-man police force has been negotiating for a contract to replace one that expired six months ago.

A former Antigonish police chief, Malcolm MacEachern, was recently charged by RCMP with theft, obstructing justice and fraud.

He has pleaded not guilty. Preliminary hearing has been set for Aug. 1.

In April, former police chief Peter Chaulker of Westville was sentenced to six months in jail after he pleaded guilty to fraud.

The town of Oxford has hired a chief and constable from a private security agency to police the community, a move the police association believes is only a means of getting "cheap labor."

In some cases, Mr. Ross said, the men from private agencies are "inferior . . . rejects from other police departments where they were either fired or not acceptable."

He said the association refuses to co-operate with private agencies in criminal matters, and is pressing the government to outlaw the use of private personnel in municipal police services.

The deputy attorney-general said the Police Services Act forbids the use of private security agencies as police forces, but this does not stop towns from renting men from private agencies and then swearing them in as constables.

'GHOULS' SPARK UPROAR IN U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Are Britons really becoming a nation of insensitive, sensation-loving sheep?

The question is a major theme of a lively controversy in the press, radio and television, sparked off by the behaviour of thousands following two serious disasters here.

"Unfortunate ghouls" and "sightseeing vultures" are only two of the more polite epithets flung at the thousands who flocked to view a rail crash in South London June 11 and a plane crash exactly a week later.

Criticism of the apparently morbid interest shown by the public in death and disaster mounted particularly after the crowd reaction to the crash of the passenger jetliner near London airport, killing all 118 people on board.

Thousands of cars jammed roads leading to the scene as their occupants stopped to watch ambulance men and police scrambling among the wreckage for possible survivors.

Michael Heseltine, Britain's aviation minister, who had to walk some three miles to the crash site because his car could not get through, expressed the feelings of many rescuers, letting fly with the now-famous phrase "unfortunate ghouls," to describe the onlookers.

A policeman, struggling to clear a way for ambulances to get through commented bitterly: "I wish I had a severed arm or a leg to show these people. That's what the ghouls seem to want."

'ON A PICNIC'

Some journalists and television commentators noted with shock that many spectators had children with them and were eating sandwiches "as though they were out on a picnic."

The "ghouls" and "vultures" had their defenders.

"The people who had a look and maybe went on to have a go at rescuing someone were ordinary, sane, compassionate human beings," The Daily Mirror commented.

"They were nearby; there was heavy-winged tragedy next door, over the hedge, just off the road; in these circumstances is there something wicked about stopping and cumstances is there something tragedy?" the newspaper asked.

But the sightseers, or would-be rescuers, proved their own worst advocates. A London evening newspaper tracked down some a few days later and published their comments.

"It was a bit of a drag (bore) really," one young man was quoted as saying. "We couldn't see anything because the hedges were too high and the police wouldn't let us get close enough."

"I just went to have a good look," another said. "After all, it's not every day you get a big air crash just outside your back door. It was better than watching it on television."

Many other Britons who only contemplated the scene on their television sets felt enough above the behavior of the crash spectators to propose a range of punishments for their weaker brethren.

SUGGESTS ARRESTS

One speaker on a radio discussion program, who won wild applause from the audience, suggested on-the-spot arrests and heavy fines. Another suggestion was that the "ghouls" should be made to look at the mangled bodies in the mortuary.

The indignation inevitably spilled over into the august correspondence columns of the London Times. More than one letter writer blamed the whole problem on television: "We are not ghouls; television has merely made us avid for more and more stimulating reality," she said.

Hydro Shows Slight Increase in Profit

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro's annual report says Hydro had a net income of $16,755,000 in the year ended March 31, up slightly from last year's $16.1 million.

Gross revenues were $305.9 million, an increase of 10.5 per cent over the 1970-1971 fiscal year. Costs totalled $289.2 million, a 10.9-per-cent increase over last year.

The report, released Friday, says the largest single cost item was interest and other debt costs, which rose 9.9 per cent during the year to $97.7 million. The largest cost increase was in salaries, wages and employee benefits which rose 16.6 per cent to $67.5 million.

The report says this increase reflects higher pay rates and improved pensions, but the comparison with the previous fiscal year is distorted by the impact of a transportation strike on the 1970-1971 figures.

Other major costs items included $52.9 million for plant depreciation, $51 million for materials and services and $20 million in grants, school taxes and water rentals charged to operating expenses.

Included in this year's costs is $3.2 million attributed to January storms that triggered a week-long supply crisis. These costs include labor and materials to repair transmission and distribution lines, power purchased from other utilities and damage to equipment.

The major portion of Hydro's gross revenues came from sales of electricity which totalled $211.4 million, a 9.6-per-cent increase over 1970-1971. Natural gas sales rose 8.9 per cent to $51.7 million, attributed to below-normal winter temperatures.

Revenues from urban and inter-urban transportation increased 13.3 per cent to $24.1 million. Revenues from rail freight operations increased 27.7 per cent to $10.2 million.

STONE CRUSHER CLEARS BLADDER

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — A technique that does away with surgery in the treatment of kidney and bladder stones has been devised at Uppsala University.

Two patients in England have successfully undergone the new treatment, which involves crushing the stones into gravel that is then washed out. The trials on the two had good results, the national Swedish news agency reported.

The instrument used in the new treatment, the brainchild of Assistant Prof. Sture Haendel of the University's Physics Institution, is a cystoscope topped by two electrodes. When the electrodes are charged pressure breaks up the stones by shock waves.

The cystoscope contains a pipeline for the fluid used in the gravel removal process. It also contains a lens through which a doctor can follow the operation.

Both patients were able to leave hospital after only a few days. With normal surgery they usually would have to stay a couple of weeks.

Pills 'A Headache'

TORONTO (CP) — One of the biggest headaches for poison control centres throughout Canada is the common headache pill.

About 30 per cent of the 50,000 children accidentally poisoned each year have taken too many such pills. Another 20 per cent are poisoned by prescription drugs while half the poisonings result from ingestion of household products.

A voluntary campaign in Essex County in Ontario indicates that child-proof caps on prescription drugs are effective. The number of child poisonings in that area was reduced from 1,000 in 1970 to less than 300 last year.

Dr. Allan Dyer, chief of drugs and therapeutics of the Ontario health department, says federal legislation is needed.

"ASA pills — aspirin — account for 30 per cent of poisoning — just for one item. It has had the red flag for years. If we could get legislation for all drugs it would eliminate 50 per cent of the poisonings."

The United States food and drug administration has announced that by Aug. 15 all headache pills must be in containers difficult for children to open.

LIMIT PACKAGES

Since April, 1970, Canada has had legislation limiting the number of children's aspirin pills in a bottle to 24 pills of 14 grains, the equal to six adult aspirins of five grains each.

The year after the legislation, the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto reported that poisonings from children's aspirins had dropped by 40 per cent while those from adult aspirins increased five per cent.

"We would like legislation on the adult 100, 200 and 300-tablet bottles," said Dr. R. J. Imrie, director of poison control for the hospital. "They should have the latest type of safety closure."

He estimated that strip or blister packaging — where each pill is sealed separately — adds about one cent to the cost of the pills.

Dr. Dyer said tests in the U.S. show that strip packaging is as good as or better than safety closures.

SMALL RESPONSE

However, Sterling Drug Co., which is carrying on a pilot project in Thunder Bay, Ont., selling aspirin in bottles with safety closures alongside regular packages, reports that the public prefers the regular package.

When the company's children's aspirin in safety closure bottles came on the market, mothers wrote in objecting that the bottles were too hard to open.

Dr. Dyer maintains that legislation is necessary because parents are not cautious enough and often tell children pills are like candy.

Calgary Nude Dancer Returns to Spotlight

CALGARY (CP) — Nude dancing has stepped into the spotlight again after plans were announced to appeal a case before the Supreme Court of Canada.

Lawyer A. Webster MacDonald Sr., who has argued the matter before three courts here, said an application is being prepared to seek the high court's permission to appeal the case for Kelly Johnson, 22, of Calgary.

After his announcement, the owner of the club where the performance occurred said he planned to resume bottomless shows.

Miss Johnson was fined $50 for giving an immoral performance by dancing nude in the club last December.

An Alberta supreme court decision quashed the verdict in February but the court's appellate division reinstated the conviction on a crown appeal in a June ruling.

MacDonald said October would be the earliest the high court would hear the application for leave to appeal.

Teen-Agers Remanded

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Two teen-age boys charged with stealing an aircraft from a West-Air hangar at Moose Jaw Airport June 21 were remanded in custody to July 13 when they appeared in court Thursday.

Richard Stewart Thomson, 15, of Winnipeg and Brian Kenneth Pullen, 15, of Fruitvale, B.C., are being tried in adult court. Both are charged with stealing the four-seater Comanche aircraft, breaking and entering and theft of a light truck. Thomson also is charged with flying without a licence.

Decision Reserved

REGINA (CP) — Decision was reserved in Court of Queen's Bench Thursday on the status of a young teacher who was dismissed by a rural school board for permitting her students to read a copy of the Vancouver underground newspaper Georgia Straight.

Margaret Gordon was dismissed by the Moosomin school unit board last October for gross misconduct in letting her Grade 9 students read an article about the first sexual experiences of a 15-year-old girl.

Appeal Delayed

WINNIPEG (CP) — The appeal hearing of a Winnipeg police detective dismissed from the force was adjourned indefinitely Thursday in order to obtain a ruling from the Manitoba Court of Appeal.

The hearing before the Manitoba Police Commission was adjourned after Roy Gallagher, counsel for the detective, questioned the validity of the commission and requested it to state a case before the appeal court.

Detective Sgt. Bruce Ginsell was suspended, and later dismissed, after the Winnipeg Police Commission heard evidence that he had obtained a portion of the reward money given to an informant for information leading to the arrest of bank robbers.

Climbers Fined

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Three United States climbers were fined $50 each in provincial court Wednesday for failing to register with the national parks branch for a mountain climb.

They became stranded on Cascade Mountain Tuesday and although two of them managed to climb down the third was rescued by helicopter. The climbers were Eugene Lareau and Mark Dodson, both of New York and Thomas McPartland of Iowa.

Speculation Tax

WINNIPEG (CP) — A bill that would impose a tax of 10 cents an acre on mineral rights held by corporations for speculative purposes was introduced for second reading in the legislature Thursday.

Finance Minister Saul Cherniack said the tax is a "nominal amount," but could encourage corporations to develop their mineral rights. The new tax, first mentioned in this year's budget speech, would go into effect Jan. 1, 1973, and is expected to yield about $300,000 in revenue during its first full year.

Bennett's Review Shows $178M Revenue Increase

B.C. revenue for the fiscal year ending March 31 increased by $178,897,829 over the previous year, according to figures in the 32nd edition of the B.C. financial and economic review released by Premier Bennett today.

Bennett said the purpose of the annual review is to provide a "concise, factual and up to date report on the financial and economic progress of British Columbia."

He claimed that the review showed the unparalleled growth of B.C.'s economy during the 1960 decade and a continuation of this growth into the 1970s.

It also outlined the greatly enlarged provincial government expenditures on education, health, housing, social services and highways in the same period.

The review shows that revenue receipts were $1,437,115,567 for 1972 as compared to $1,258,217,738 in the previous year. At the start of the 1960 decade revenues were $368,780,091.

B.C. total assets were $2,726,289,233 as compared to $2,434,549,845 last year, for an increase of $291,789,388 and up to $004,304,375 from the beginning of the 1960 decade.

Expenditures on health and social services in the last 12 months was $505,943,787, an increase from last year of $43,812,665. Education expenditure was $393,591,665, almost six times the amount spent at the start of the 1960 decade. The expenditure in the 12 months was $34,680,117.

Total payments to hospitals for patient care under provincial hospital insurance were $206,272,600, an increase of $22,865,667 over the previous year.

The overall medical services plan of B.C. reported a total expenditure of $143,891,237 in its third year of operation — $24,486,351 more than in the first year, according to the report.

The report said that 62 per cent of the plan's revenue for last year came from provincial sources.

Provincial government homeowner grants of $66,175,469 were paid in the 12 months to reduce local school and other taxes on homes throughout the province — $5,825,702 more than in the previous 12 months.

More than $2 million has been paid out since January 1972 under the new elderly citizens renters' grant, the report said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A construction company operator was fined a total of $400 — the minimum allowed under law — when he appeared in provincial court Friday on charges of tax fraud.

Mauno Laitinen, of 5811 West Saanich Road, was charged separately as a director of Bothnia Construction Ltd., 824 Fort.

He and the firm were fined $200 each for failing to remit to the government $264.10 in income taxes deducted from employees for the month of August, 1971.

Laitinen pleaded guilty for himself and the company.

He was given two months to pay both fines, after pleas of guilty were accepted on the two counts by Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

William James Bevin Smart, 20, of 220 Moss, was fined $225 for possession of hashish when he appeared in the afternoon session before Judge F. S. Green.

Smart was arrested at 12:35 a.m. April 23 after he emerged from a beer parlor on Langley Street. He had a bag containing six small cubes and one large cube of hashish.

Green told the accused that first-offence possession of "so-called soft drugs" was a crime more and more condoned by the public, but pointed out that the law still considered it punishable by up to six months imprisonment and $1,000 fine.

The accused was ordered to pay the fine at the rate of $75 per month.

W. Germans License Gun Owners

BONN, (AP)—West Germans wanting to own guns now have to register them and prove their need for them under the terms of the first new firearms law since the Nazis encouraged private ownership of weapons.

The law passed uncontested in parliament Friday after a wave of bombings and terrorism by the anarchist Red Army Faction. Four Americans were killed and at least 36 persons were injured in bombings of U.S. Army and West German military installations that climaxed the outbreak.

Changes in the old law long had been resisted by West German arms manufacturers and marksmen's associations.

In the matter of expense

The thought that bereavement should impose a financial burden upon anyone is not a pleasant one. At Hayward's Funeral Chapel we are prepared to serve anyone from any walk of life. It is not necessary to join a so-called "Society" in order to achieve minimal expense.

At Hayward's we respect each family's financial circumstances, and we provide the type of service you prefer. We will discuss costs fully and frankly at any time with no obligation.

We stand ready to serve the family's wishes, quietly, sympathetically, with efficiency and dignity.

Just Call It 'Controversy Plant'

By JACK BEASTALL

Wistaria is a climbing plant that could well be given the common name of "Controversy Plant."

After 250 years in cultivation there is still controversy over the spelling of its name; whether the 14 species on the market are actually variants of the seven species found in China, America and Australia, and what culture is essential to produce good flowering.

The name honors Caspar Wistar (1761-1818), Professor of Anatomy, University of Pennsylvania, therefore should be spelled Wistaria. An error in early records showed his name as Wister, and by the law of nomenclature "ter" takes precedence over "tar". Both spellings are given in the more complete garden encyclopedias.

The best known species in this latitude are sinensis (also spelled chinensis) from China, and floribunda (also called multijuga and macrobotrys) from Japan. These two species have distinct characteristics.

In contrast, Wistaria floribunda from Japan, has flower clusters to 48 inches in length, fragrant, 13 to 19 small leaflets compose one leaf, turns yellow in fall, leaves appear during flowering, and the vines twine from right to left.

The flowers of W. sinensis are comparatively large and the entire cluster opens within a few days but fades in seven to 10 days. Thus we have a brief but outstanding display.

Individual flowers of W. floribunda are much smaller, those at the top of the cluster opening first, then opening proceeds slowly down the long flower stems to the tip. This means a few fragrant flowers on each cluster over a period of three weeks.

While most of us think of Wistaria flowers as being lavender colored, there are also named varieties of floribunda in peach, pink, pale lilac, white, and the variety floraplena with large double flowers of deep violet. Sinensis is limited to purples and pure white.

Considerable argument continues over what is called the "correct" culture of a Wistaria. Practices given as essential late in the last century are now considered harmful, while culture for one part of this continent seems useless in another part.

An understanding of the nature of the plant we are growing is often our best guide.

First, the Wistaria is a climbing plant. Plants that climb do so to get their tops above their neighbors in the open sunshine, but germination of the seed, and early growth of the plant always takes place beneath other shrubs and trees.

Beneath other vegetation, climbers find the cool soil for their extensive root systems, so the first requirement for climbers is shade for the rot area and the lower part of the plant.

Many of our common garden climbers will make only a loose shrub when planted in full sun because there is no need to outgrow other plants to get sunlight.

Secondly, Wistarias need not only a rich (plenty of humus) deeply-dug soil, but also plenty of moisture in that soil.

When the plant hunter, E. H. Wilson, studied the genus in China he found that plants growing by streams and pools produced flower clusters 64 inches long!

The two American species are both native to damp ground, one ranging from Virginia to Florida and into Texas, the other a swamp plant from Illinois to Arkansas.

Thirdly, under garden cultivation the Wistarias need pruning twice a year for good flowering. The rampant thin growths must be shortened during summer (July into August here) and the shortened growths cut back to two or three buds during winter (February to March).

Our illustration this week shows a flower cluster of sinensis and floribunda (multijuga) for comparison, showing why your plant may not appear so spectacular when in flower as plants seen in other gardens.

At the top is one leaf composed of 11 leaflets. It is necessary to distinguish between a leaf and a leaflet, since pruning instructions call for cutting back a growth to about four leaves. Some gardeners interpret this as cutting back one leaf to four leaflets.

Summer pruning consists of cutting back all long growths to about four leaves. This is done with a knife as shown in the drawing.

Eventually these shortened growths will produce flower buds near their bases, and the growth becomes a flowering spur which will continue to elongate and produce flowers year after year. Flowering spurs should never be cut off.

Shortened summer growths that have not as yet developed flower buds are shortened further to two growth buds in winter, usually at fruit tree pruning time in late February or during early March.

Flowering spurs are also shortened in winter as shown in the drawing.

Two things the Wistaria does not like are transplanting and fertilizer. Young plants grow to 18 inches with a bunch of leaves at the top for the first three years, then are ready to plant in the garden. It is usually two more years before they produce the climbing stem.

Fertilizer causes rampant growth at the expense of flowers. The only time to apply a general fertilizer if it is needed (not otherwise) is during late February. Since the root system is deep and extensive a small amount of fertilizer has to be spread over a large area.

While sinensis comes fairly true from seed, there is great variation in seedling floribundas, which is the reason for poor plants when growers produce them from seed.

All named varieties are grafted plants.

Controversy, confusing cultural instructions, and poor seedling plants, contribute to the mediocre plants we see in gardens today.

WORK FOR WEEK

By JACK BEASTALL

Sweet peas must be picked daily if pods are to be avoided. Feed weekly with manure water or alginure.

Don't forget to give rock garden or sloping bank thorough soaking. This does not apply if alpines requiring summer drought are grown there.

Pick off fading flowers and seed pods of roses. Give one feeding and soak well to wash the fertilizer to root area. A mulch of half rotten compost on surface will prevent soil baking dry.

Peas need picking almost daily even though not enough for a meal. Can be used raw in salads.

Cut herbs for drying as first flowers open. Use green dill and other annuals freely in summer salads.

Sow parsley, swiss chard, black Spanish (winter) radish all for use in early winter.

Leave a few gooseberries to ripen on upper branches in sun for eating, using lower for cooking. They taste quite different when fully ripe.

YACHT 'FROM NOWHERE' SLIPS HOME A WINNER

By ROSS GILLIGAN

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuter) — Alain Colas, unshaven and bleary-eyed from lack of sleep, but tremendously excited, plowed into Newport harbor aboard his giant trimaran Pen Duick IV Friday night to win the transatlantic singlehanded yacht race in record time.

Colas, coming from nowhere — he had not been seen or heard from since July 1 — appeared suddenly from the Atlantic mist only two miles from the finish line.

The young Frenchman had escaped the notice of search planes and roving yachts to beat the huge 128-foot French schooner Vendredi 13 into Newport for a record crossing of 20 days—six days inside the record set in 1968 by Geoffrey Williams in the yacht Sir Thomas Lipton.

Vendredi 13, sailed by Jean-Yves Terlain, passed Nantucket light with only 105 miles to go at 2:20 p.m. EDT Friday, and had been expected to the cross the finish line—as the winner— around sunrise today.

But Colas, who overcame a broken self-steering gear early in the race, slipped into claim the prize in the 70-foot, ketch-rigged Pen Duick IV.

Colas' girl-friend was first aboard to greet him after he passed through U.S. customs and immigration and she was followed by his brother.

Everyone drank champagne toasts and Colas then retired to his cabin while reporters clambered over the Pen Duick IV.

Colas later emerged to tell them that he felt fit although he had only cat-napped in the last 76 hours.

He said he was happy with the time he had made and recalled he had predicted before he left Plymouth at the start of the race that he would make it in 21 days.

He added: "I should have been here yesterday but I sat 30 hours in calms."

Pen Duick IV was originally built for French sailor Eric Tabarly, who won the 1964 singlehanded race.

Colas said he had spent the last four years getting ready for the race. He said he had crewed with Tabarly for 18,000 miles and had put in 40,000 miles alone aboard Pen Duick IV.

Summing up his trip, Colas, asked why he undertook such a gruelling venture, replied: "I must be some sort of maniac."

196 Charges Follow Rape

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A total of 196 felony counts have been filed against 13 motorcycle gang members accused of holding two 17-year-old B.C. girl tourists in an East Oakland house for four hours and raping them.

Each was charged with nine counts of forcible rape, one count of sodomy and five counts of oral copulation. Duane H. Laney, 31, of Ogden, Utah, was charged additionally with possessing an illegal weapon, a blackjack.

Hill Makes Hay in Tall Grass

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Dave Hill, one-time bad boy of the pro golf tour, credited Canadian veteran Al Balding's tutoring with helping him over some problem holes Friday.

The lesson came to light early in the day and by nightfall had vaulted the 35-year-old native of Jackson, Mich., into a share of the lead in the $150,000 Canadian Open golf championship with Lou Graham.

The two PGA tour veterans were locked at 136, six under par after 36 holes on Cherry Hill Club's 6,751-yard par-71 layout heading into today's third round in quest of the $30,000 pot of gold that goes to the leader Sunday.

They hold a one-stroke lead over Gay Brewer, who was in contention until he bogeyed the 18th hole, missing a one-foot putt that cost him a share of the lead.

Grouped at 138, two strokes back of the leaders and four under par, were Lenny Thompson, Charles Sifford, Bobby Mitchell and Bruce Crampton.

First-day leader Bunky Henry, who opened with a course record 65, blew to a 74 and shared eighth place at 139 with Tom Sanderson, who had a 73, Sam Adams, Deane Beman, Tommy Aaron, Jimmy Dent and Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., the top Canadian, shared 140 with Gary Player and Phil Rodgers. In all, 28 players broke par Friday beneath sunny skies that started to dry out rain-drenched fairways and greens.

"Al showed me how to get out of the tall grass when we were playing at the Westchester (Mass.) Open a year ago," Hill recalled Friday. "I didn't really make use of it again until today.

"It had to do with pitching out of tall grass. We were discussing it at breakfast this morning, the tall rough they have here, and suddenly it all came back.

"I used the shot three times today and Sunday, three times."

Balding wasn't nearly so fortunate. He had a 79 Friday and a two-round total of 156 to miss the halfway cut of 147 for the low 70 and ties entering the championship flight today and Sunday. Seventy-

In addition to Panasiuk, the only Canadians to survive the cut from 23 homegrown starters were George Knudson of Toronto at 143, Bob Cox of Richmond, B.C., 145, and veteran Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., one of two amateurs in the tourney, at 147.

Sifford, who has been playing in the Canadian Open every year since 1955, with the exception of last year when he missed the exemption list, had a strong front nine.

He birdied three, four, five, six, 10 and 13 before "I three-putted the 14th from 15 feet and the wheels came off." He also bogeyed the 17th to round out at four-under 67 to go with his opening-day 71.

Defending champion Lee Trevino, still in contention at even-par 142 despite a 73 Friday, still isn't convinced it will take a low score to win.

"I still think a 289 will win this thing," said the 1971 U.S., Canadian and British Opens champion who will fly out Sunday for Muirhead, Scotland, in defence of his British crown. "There are a lot of six and seven unders out there, but the greens are getting faster and tougher."

Player, one of the pre-tournament favorites along with Trevino and Arnold Palmer who finished the day at 142, credited greenskeepers with keeping the course in top shape "despite weird conditions."

Morgan Misses Cutoff; Four Canucks Make It

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A native contingent of 23 started the Canadian Open golf championship Thursday but only four Canadians survived after Friday's cutoff.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, who matched his opening-round 70 for a two-under-par 140, was the leader among the four surviving Canadians.

Others still in the field for the final two rounds today and Sunday were Bob Cox of Richmond, George Knudson of Toronto and amateur Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont.

Knudson remained in contention for a piece of the $150,000 prize pot with a 143 while Cox had a 145 and Weslock was just on the margin with 147.

The group at 154 had John Morgan of Victoria, Ken Trowbridge of Bolton, Ont.; Tom Tremblay, Brantford; Gary Slatter, Burlington, and Jack Bisseger, Montreal. Morgan had an 80 Friday.

Leon DeCaire of Toronto blew to a 156 along with Toronto's Al Balding, and Bill Wright of Edmonton had a 157. Ben Kern of Toronto dropped out Thursday with an attack of bursitis in his shoulder.

That Smoking Fastball Is The Toughest To Hit

Some otherwise untold tidbits for a short-order day, or the tennis tip of the week from Rod Laver is: "If you can't serve big, serve a slice."

For which there will be no charge, and also: "Vary the racquet angle with each hit." These tips may not make you a champ, but they'll keep your opponent loose, and perhaps get you a win.

For the baseballers, especially the younger ones, the advice of Rogers Hornsby might be helpful in bumping up that average. First, it should be explained, that a smoking fastball, in baseball, or softball, is the hardest of all pitches to hit. Agreed? Okay.

And if that is yet another reason perhaps why Little Leagers shouldn't throw curves, here's what Hornsby says of hitting:

"Many factors are involved in being able to hit a fastball, but the trick I found most helpful was that when I was at the plate I always expected every pitch to be a fastball. Accordingly, I was always ready. Some might say this sets you up for a curve, or a change-up, but it is easier to adjust to a slower pitch than to a quick one."

So, rear back, and fire, kids. It is the first thing a major league scout looks for, and most batters can't hit.

And, speaking of baseball, watch for the re-introduction of the Boudreau shift. Never heard of it, eh? You're dated if you do.

This was a manoeuvre designed by Lou Boudreau when he managed Cleveland Indians and was devised to cut down on the potential of Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox.

Williams was a power hitter, first, foremost and always. And many of his hits were screaming line drives right down, or just inside, the right field foul line.

Boudreau simply moved all his defensive players to the right, and defied Williams to hit the ball by them, or through them. Williams accepted the dare, and was stubborn enough to believe he could overpower the shift. He wouldn't adjust and hit to left field where there were no fielders.

Now, with Henry Aaron of Atlanta Braves closing in on Babe Ruth's home run mark of 714, teams have been moving to the left side to defense him. And undoubtedly they will do it more often in the future.

Recently Aaron was quoted to the effect that he agreed with Williams that the best way to beat the shift was to try and overpower it. This would make him a more aggressive hitter, and thus he would hit the ball harder.

Apparently he has made up his mind.

Then there is the thought that by doing this, Aaron is only hurting himself. He is being faced with two challenges, the Ruthian record, and the shift. And it just might slow him down in his quest of the former. Previously Aaron was a spray hitter, and a good one.

Conjecture on Aaron is even more interesting when it is considered that Williams, after his playing career was over, admitted he had been foolish to try and drive the ball through a stacked defence, when he could just as easily hit for a much better average by poking the ball into left field.

Over to you, Hank.

Meanwhile, Bruce Twamley is headed for Ipswich again for a renewal of his professional soccer career. Hopefully, that is, because before Bruce left, he sprained his left ankle. Add to that the fact that it was a gimpy right knee that caused him trouble before, and he may have a problem making the team . . . Now the horse shows have been hit by a drug problem. In the U.S. recently the order went out against the abnormal use of vitamin B. Only "as recommended by the manufacturer," is the new directive . . . And no, Canadian football fans won't get to see the CFL games that come out of the U.S. Coast TV stations are't allowed to use the games because of the proximity to Vancouver, and the 75-mile blackout radius . . . If the Vancouver Canucks become the first NHL team to test the World Hockey Association in court, the object of their attention will be Rosaire Paiement, the temperamental right winger. Paiement has jumped to Chicago after agreeing to terms with the Canucks, and the difference between the two contracts is $30,000 over two years. Why GM Bud Poile would bother with Paiement is a better question, because, after all, Paiement has been treated fairly by the Canucks. When Rosaire got 34 goals in his first season, he was given a 50-per-cent raise. When he got only 10 last year, he still received a 25-per-cent hike. Now that he as jumped, the Canucks should be happy to leave him where he is . . .

EX-RAM FACES CHARGES AFTER OFFERING PLAYBOOK

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former Los Angeles Ram quarterback Karl Sweetan was held under $25,000 bond Friday, accused of trying to sell a Rams' playbook to the New Orleans Saints for $3,500.

Charged with Sweetan was his cousin, Wayne Maurice Boswell, 31, Boswell and Sweetan, 29, both live in Dallas. They were arrested by FBI agents while dickering with Saints coach J. D. Roberts at a downtown motel.

Roberts had notified National Football League officials and the FBI had been called in on the case when Roberts was first contacted a few days earlier.

Sweetan was traded by the Saints to the Rams shortly before the 1969 season and remained with the Rams until being cut by them last year.

He later joined Edmonton Eskimos but did not play with the CFL club.

Sweetan and Boswell were charged with fraud involving interstate telephone communications, which carries maximum punishment of a $1,000 fine and five years' imprisonment, and interstate transportation of stolen wares valued at $5,000 or more, which carries a maximum penalty of $10,000 and 10 years.

Officials said only the first charge would apply if the book was found to be out of date and consequently of no monetary value.

Rain Delays Tennis Final

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Rain forced postponement today of the Wimbledon tennis program, including the men's singles final between Stan Smith of the United States and Ilie Nastase of Romania.

Tournament officials said the matches would be played Sunday, weather permitting.

In addition to the men's singles final, the women's doubles final and the mixed doubles semi-finals and final were to be completed.

Smith's confidence took something of a beating Friday when, together with his Davis Cup partner Erik Van Dillen, of San Mateo, Calif., he was easily beaten in three sets — 6-2, 6-2, 9-7 — by South Africans Frew McMilland and Bob Hewitt in the finals of the men's doubles.

This year, Billie Jean King already has won the women's title for the fourth time since 1966.

The weather also foiled Mrs. King's bid for a triple. Billie Jean and Betty Stove of The Netherlands are in the women's doubles final against Judy Dalton of Australia and Francoise Durr of France.

And in the mixed doubles semi-finals Friday, she was trying to reach the final, partnered by Clark Graebner of New York, against Nastase and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco. The match was halted by rain with the score at 9-8 and 5-5 in favor of Nastase and Miss Casals.

Santos Drubs All-Stars

VANCOUVER (CP) — Santos of Brazil, led by soccer immortal Pele, crushed an all-star team from the British Columbia Premier Soccer League, 5-0, in an exhibition game Friday.

Although Pele didn't play at more than half-speed throughout the game, he still displayed some clever footwork and set up a number of picturesque plays.

Edu, a speedy winger, scored two goals, one in each half, with other goals coming from Jeder, Alfonso and Nane.

Pele was most impressive with field-generalship, laying down pin-point passes. He only managed two shots on goal, neither of them dangerous.

Little Leaguers Clear Decks

With eyes set on Williamsport, Pa., and the Little League Baseball world series, 12 local all-star teams take the first step on a long trail Tuesday.

Area play will consist of four three-team, double-loss elimination tournaments. Winners of each area advances to the district championships at Hampton Park starting July 18.

The winner of the double-loss district title meets the upper-Island district champion for the Vancouver Island sectional title in a best-of-three series beginning July 28 at Hampton.

Out of the Island series, a representative for the B.C. tourney starting Aug. 6 in Burnaby will emerge. Winner of the provincial crown also collects a berth in the Canadian final beginning Aug. 14 in Edmonton and a chance to go to the world series at Williamsport from Aug. 21 to 26.

American, which went to the B.C. tournament before being eliminated last year, is playing host to the Area IV tourney at Allenby Park and meets Oak Bay in the opener. The winner tackles Central Saanich, which collected the bye, on Wednesday.

In the Area I tourney at Lampson Street Park, Esquimalt-Victoria West takes on Oak Bay on Tuesday with Hampton receiving the bye.

At National Park on Hillside Avenue, Lake Hill plays National in the Area II opener and Triangle has the bye to Wednesday.

Area III competitors play at Hollywood Park on Fairfield Road with Gordon Head facing Pat Bay in the opening game and Fairfield, the host club, taking a rest until Wednesday.

All games in the area and district tournaments start at 6:30 p.m. with one encounter each night.

Killebrew Has the Idea About Welcome Message

Twins Respond For New Pilot

By The Associated Press

It didn't take Frank Quilici long to learn that the best strategy for a Minnesota Twins manager is to have Harmon Killebrew at the plate in a tight game swinging his bat.

And you can bet that Quilici, making his debut as skipper of the Twins, didn't even consider giving Killebrew the take sign when the burly slugger stepped up against New York's Fritz Peterson in the seventh inning Friday night following Rod Carew's two-out single. The Yankees were trying to protect a slim 2-1 lead.

Killebrew promptly deposited a 2-1 pitch 385 feet over the fence in left-centre field and the Twins went on to a 5-2 victory, breaking a four-game losing streak under ousted pilot Bill Rigney.

"I wanted to jump through the top of the dugout," was the 33-year-old Quilici's reaction when he saw the ball disappearing over the fence.

Elsewhere in the American League, Texas Rangers edged Baltimore Orioles 5-4, Detroit Tigers shaded Chicago White Sox 6-4, Milwaukee Brewers trounced Oakland Athletics and Vida Blue 9-4, Boston Red Sox defeated California Angels 5-3 in 10 innings and Kansas City Royals downed Cleveland Indians 6-3.

HOMER IS REMINDER

"That home run reminded me of a big hit he got here in 1965 against the Yankees just before the All-Star break," Quilici recalled. He was referring to a two-out, two-run ninth-inning homer that gave Minnesota a 6-5 triumph and a five-game lead en route to the American league flag. "I know it gave us a lot of momentum then."

That brought up the subject of whether the third-place Twins have a shot at Oakland in the American League West.

"We've got 13 games against Oakland," said Quilici, who succeeded in reducing the Twins' deficit from nine to eight games in his one day at the helm. "We've got to go head-on against them and they'll be pointing for us, too. I definitely think we have a chance or I would have told Mr. Griffith" (owner Calvin Griffith) I didn't want to manage."

Quilici's inaugural was a frustrating one for six innings as the Twins collected eight hits off Peterson but only one run.

RANGERS NIP ORIOLES

Ted Kubiak's double following singles by Ted Ford and Joe Lovitto broke a 4-4 tie in the fifth inning and enabled Texas to nip Baltimore as Jim Panther protected the slender margin with five shutout innings of relief.

The Rangers jumped to a 4-0 lead after two innings, with Baltimore errors making all the runs unearned. Don Mincher drove in two with a sacrifice fly and single.

The White Sox have dropped four in a row but remained five games behind Oakland in the West when the Brewers, of all people, gave Cy Young Award winned Blue the worst beating of his career, pounding him for eight runs—including homers by Davy May, George Scott and Ollie Brown—in six innings-plus. Dave Duncan homered for the Athletics.

Pirate Catcher Enjoys Atlanta

By The Associated Press

Atlanta holds fond memories for Milt May. About a year ago, he heard wedding bells ringing there. And Friday he had new reasons to celebrate.

"That's my best night ever in pro ball, the most hits I've ever had in one night," Pittsburgh's second-string catcher said after slapping out seven of them in nine at-bats against Atlanta Braves.

May played both ends of the twi-night doubleheader against the Braves so the Pirates could give Manny Sanguillen a rest. The Buc's starting catcher, among the National League's batting leaders with a .338 average, caught all 17 innings of their 7-3 victory against Astros Wednesday night in Houston.

DRIVES IN FOUR

Gene Alley drove in four Pittsburgh runs with a homer and a single—but May was the hitting star in the opener, going 5-for-5 with two RBI and two runs scored.

"I could hit five balls harder than I did tonight and go 0-for-5," May insisted, adding he "got lucky breaks on two hits, one on a checked swing, one on a bad hop past first."

He calmed down a bit in the second game, going a mere 2-for-4 with a run-scoring double. Eighth-inning singles by Darrel Evans, Mike Lum and Dusty Baker broke the 2-2 tie that gave Atlanta the split.

Steve Carlton, recording his 11th victory, struck out eight San Diego batters in the Phillies' opening-game victory to raise his major league-leading total to 174, then Clay Kirby struck out 11 Phils and Fred Kendall backed him up with a pair of home runs to give the Padres the nightcap.

Joe Pepitone belted his first home run of the season and Billy Williams doubled home a run to beat the Reds.

NOT BACK LONG

"I know I can hit," said Pepitone, who returned a week ago from a two-month baseman is batting a meagre baseman is batting a meager .175. "It's a matter of getting my timing back—but it's certainly embarrassing to hit your first homer at this time of the season."

Don Sutton raised his record to 10-4 with a three-hitter against the Mets.

Ken Singleton drove in three runs and Bob Bailey scored three as the Expos teed off against Sudden Sam McDowell, kayoing the San Francisco fireballer in the third inning.

Threatening Role Taken by O'Dell

Hosts Serve Shutout

The host team is off and running in the second annual Seaboard Invitational men's softball tournament.

Seaboards, sparked by Barry Wilkin's four-hit pitching and back-to-back home runs by Scott Sinclair and Brian Grexton, defeated Churchill Hotel 7-0 Friday at Central Park in the opening game of a six-team, double-knockout tournament.

Play was scheduled to resume this morning and will wind up Sunday.

B.C. JUNIOR TEST OPENS ON MONDAY

The 72-hole event opens Monday at Point Grey Club in Vancouver. A field of 122 will play 36 holes Monday with the low 100 scorers advancing into Tuesday's round. Only the low 50 and ties will advance into Wednesday's windup round.

TALL SCHOOLBOY WHIZ FINAL MEN'S TEAM CUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's national basketball team is in Mexico City today for a couple of exhibition games, with coach Jack Donohue finally down to the 12 players who will represent Canada at the Olympic Games in Munich in August.

Final cut from the team was Lars Hansen, 17, a six-foot-10 schoolboy wonder from Coquitlam. Donohue said Hansen had a good chance of making the second team, which will represent Canada on a goodwill tour to China in August.

Members of the national team are:

Guards Ron Thorsen (University of British Columbia); Gary Smith (formerly of Simon Fraser University); Ted Stoesz (University of Manitoba); Tom Kieswetter (University of Waterloo); forwards Derek Sankey (UBC); Phil Tollestrup (Raymond, Alta.); Ross Wedlake and Bob Towne (U. of Man.); John Cassidy (Dalhousie); Jamie Russell (Toronto); centres Terry McKay (formerly of UBC) and Tim Tollestrup (Raymond).

Manager is John Restivo from the University of Manitoba and trainer is Dexter Nelson from the University of Calgary.

National Women's Squad Includes Three Islanders

COURTENAY — Three players from Vancouver Island are among eight British Columbia athletes named Friday to the Canadian national women's basketball team.

Heather Witzel of Courtenay, who played last season for University of Saskatchewan, Angie Dobie (formerly Radanovich) or Nanaimo, who played with Victoria Maplettes, and Wendy Grant of Campbell River, who was with University of British Columbia Thunderettes last season, were the Islanders named to the 13-member team by coach Darlene Currie of Vancouver.

Other B.C. players named were Betty Ross of Vancouver, Debbie Phalen of New Westminster, Kathy Williams and Sheila Strike of West Vancouver and Joanne Sargent of Canoe.

Rounding out the team are Marg Currie of Regina, Joyce Douthwright of Gunningsville, N.B., Pat Tatham of Kitchener, Angie Johnson of Winnipeg and Liz Silcott of Montreal.

The 10-day camp started with 17 players July 1 and will wind up Monday when the team prepares to leave for Italy and Sicily on an exhibition tour. The team returns to Canada Aug. 11 and heads for China on Aug. 14 for another exhibition series.

Two exhibition games have been scheduled here this weekend against a men's squad from Courtenay. The contests are scheduled for tonight at 8 and for Sunday at 10 a.m.

Hot Six Milers Leave Basement

Six Mile House has momentum in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Despite being held to only two hits, the Six Milers reeled off their fourth straight victory Friday at Heywood Park by tripping Labatts 4-1.

Season-long occupants of the cellar, Six Mile left last place to Sooke Merchants and are only one point out of fourth in the seven-team league.

Barry Jackson, whose appearance has revived Six Milers' fortunes, scattered six hits to gain credit for victory. But the key to Friday's triumph was Six Mile's ability to make the most of limited scoring chances.

The winners scored a run without the benefit of a hit in the first inning, added two in the third with the help of Pete Russell's double and a costly two-base error, then added another unearned tally in the sixth on Russell's second hit of the game.

Russ Carruthers was the hard-luck loser.

Wrestling Card On Tap Tonight

Duncan McTavish will battle Gene Kiniski in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card tonight in Memorial Arena.

Steven Little Bear, who was originally scheduled to meet Kiniski in an attempt to regain the Pacific Coast title, is still recovering from injuries received while losing the crown in Vancouver.

In other bouts, beginning at 8, John Quinn and Bulldog Brown meet Buck Ramstead and Eddie Morrow in a tag-team tussle, Hahn Lee grapples Emir Akbar and Ray Glenn takes on Jack Bence.

Streak Stretched

Undefeated Esquimalt Teamsters reeled off their 11th victory in the Vancouver Island Intermediate Lacrosse League by defeating Saanich Charmans 18-7 Thursday at Pearkes Arena.

Bruce McKinnon sparked the runaway leaders with three goals and three assists. Rick Lapointe, Rick Legatt, Ross McKinstry, Ron McKay, Basil Rodalt and Steve Buckley contributed two goals apiece while Rob McKay, Keith Treichel and Kim Browning added singles.

PETER MURRAY - EDITOR

A Thriller From History

By BEATRICE CARROLL

It would be impossible, it seems, for John Hersey to write a dull novel or to repeat and rework a theme. Whether his framework is the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, (for which he won a Pulitzer Prize), the Italian campaign in World War Two, the Detroit riots of 1967 or the horrors of the Warsaw ghetto, his books are authentic and compelling.

In The Conspiracy Hersey turns to historical fiction for the first time, basing his story on an actual plot in 64-65 A.D. to murder the Roman emperor and tyrant, Nero. He founds his account on facts from Tacitus and Suetonius, and if this sounds stuffy and reminiscent of school day Latin lessons, it is not.

This is a thriller (the author calls it an "entertainment" a la the early Graham Greene) but it goes far deeper. Basically the story tells of the struggle between artistic and creative man, as exemplified by the main conspirators, Lucan and his uncle, Seneca, and the power-mad Nero, who at the age of 28 has been involved in matricide, uxoricide, arson and sexual deviations of great originality.

Heading the conspiratorial circle is Caius Calpurnius Piso, a liberal and aristocrat, and the plot is known as the Pisonian conspiracy. The prime movers, though, are the brilliant young poet Lucan, whose work has now been proscribed by Nero, and his uncle, the famous Stoic philosopher, who was once Nero's tutor, and one of the most respected men in the empire. The villains are not only Nero but two classical, cynical thugs, Tigellinus, co-commander of the Praetorian Guard, and Paenus, the Tribune of the secret police . . . and their communications make blood chilling reading.

Memorable lesser characters are numerous; the malignant, powerful Agrippina, Nero's mother, the Senator Scaevinus, and the "tawny beauty" Epicharis, mistress to Lucan's father, are among the colorful cast. Brilliantly drawn too are events in Rome in the first century A.D., with its orgies and superstitions — the race of the cripples, the violent and murderous sports, the import of astrologers and augurs, and over all the oppressive tyranny.

Naturally the ending can only be tragic, for we know that Nero lived another three years and died a suicide at 31.

The style of The Conspiracy adds greatly to the suspense and high drama of this ancient tale. Told in communique form, it is a skilful composition of elegantly expressed letters, official documents, terse police messages and secret orders, and case histories of all the suspects under surveillance.

This is highly recommended reading.

Our Indian Heritage

By PETER MURRAY

Photographer-writer Anthony Carter, an amateur in the best sense of the word, is making a unique contribution to the lore of British Columbia.

Abundant Rivers is the former fisherman's third book in a projected series entitled "Indian Heritage." The focus of his sensitive camera is on the expressive faces of our native people, and on the matchless landscape we have inherited and share with them.

ABUNDANT RIVERS, by Anthony Carter. Hancock House. $15.95.

His text provides a few historical facts but is concerned mainly with setting down some of the Indian legends that Carter has learned in conversation with tribal elders.

Carter's respect for them and their trust of him shines throughout all the books.

His new book, like his first, Somewhere Between, is more of a hodgepodge. Some of the Lower Mainland area photographs are almost repetitious, in fact.

There is a fine section on the Mount Currie Reserve and its colorful inhabitants living under the brooding mountain peaks near Pemberton, but for me the block comes alive in its last third dealing with the Indians of the Skeena and Nass rivers. One might have hoped for a single volume on this entrancing area of the province.

The design of Abundant Rivers, typography and layout, all supervised by Carter, is once again excellent, reflecting his faultless taste.

After putting out the first two volumes on his own, Carter is now associated with Hancock House of Saanichton, a new publishing venture in this area, and the merchandising savvy of David and Lyn Hancock should help promote his work.

We look forward to the next volume, scheduled for next year, entitled From History's Locker and dealing with Vancouver Island.

Coincidence Run Wild

By MARION JENKINS

Joan Aiken is known for her children's books and suspense novels; her most recent work, A Cluster of Separate Sparks, is in the latter category. In this tale of adventure, the past is linked mysteriously — and I might add, rather incredibly — with the eventual present. The Greek setting, the island of Dendros (Rhodes), adds color to the heroine's bizarre experiences.

The plot of this novel is loosely episodic in structure; the series of far-fetched adventures are no more than obstacles in the way of solving a rather unbelievable mystery. Although there is an element of suspense, the clues, as well as the outcome, are obvious.

A superficial picture of the heroine emerges through her quest to find the truth, but there isn't really any character development. In fact, the characters are really types: Captain Cruikshank, burdened with his guilt, is like the Ancient Mariner telling his story. Georgia is more of a Gothic heroine than a real person.

The simple, fast-moving style matches the fleeting quality of the adventures which are sometimes flavored with rather delicious images. However, the heroine's sense of humor in the desperate circumstances is slightly hard to digest. How can one think coolly in a rapidly-heating

Although the mystery is fun to solve, the hinge on which the plot turns is not stable. Coincidence runs riot, along with the adventures. The "separate sparks" need to cluster together more tightly to shine through the mystery.

As a sharp contrast to Miss Aiken's book Bridget Everitt's first novel of suspense, A Cold Front, stands out as being thoughtfully conceived and skilfully written. Unlike the episodic structure of A Cluster of Separate Sparks, the threads of this plot are tightly woven. Clues are subtle and details are significant.

One becomes gradually immersed in the story, taking in little hints dropped by the narrator that something is different. Yet it is difficult to hazard a guess as to the outcome. Suddenly, a surprising but logical climax is reached, and one is tuned in to the previous clues and the following details which lead to the meaningful denouement.

Another contrast between the two tales is in the author's use of setting. In Miss Aiken's book the setting provides a colorful background for the heroine's adventures, but it is not necessarily relevant. In Miss Everitt's book the setting has a purpose .What better places than Venice, and even more so, Cyprus, to explore the conflicting loyalties felt by the characters in the novel.

Not only are Miss Everitt's settings more relevant than Miss Aiken's, but her characters are more developed and believable. They are normal people caught up in a strange web of events.

A Love Between Two Women

Patience and Sarah was first published in a limited edition under the title A Place for Us. The author, under another name, has published two other books.

With her female companion, Miss Brundidge, she lived a peaceful life on a farm in Greene County.

Under the fictional names of Patience White and Sarah Dowling, the two women experience many problems before achieving their goal. Their love for each other, which began when they lived on neighboring farms in Connecticut, was opposed by both families. Sarah, who had always been treated as the son her father never had, is capable and sensible, yet naive and uneducated; Patience, on the other hand, as the maiden aunt in her brother's family, is more feminine and cultured.

Prevented from seeing each other, Sarah starts out alone to find a farm. Even though she is disguised as a boy, she encounters many difficulties, until she meets the kindly Parson Peel who eventually leads her back to her home. Once more Sarah and Patience meet, and their love is renewed.

When their forbidden relationship is discovered, they are encouraged to leave their homes for good. Through their journey to Greene County, not in itself momentous, they learn a great deal about themselves. They finally find a suitable farm, after some hardships and only their feelings to guide them.

This strange little story is told with simplicity and dignity. The fact that it takes place in New England in the 19th Century gives added dimension to this love relationship between two women. The confining farm community in which they grow up — with its tightly-knit family life, prayer meetings and moral restrictions — acts against their natural impulses. Yet they courageously set out to fulfil their dream:

"I held Sarah's hand and felt the ancient sea and the new wheels carry us to a life we had no pattern for, that no one we knew of had ever lived, that we must invent for ourselves on a razor's edge, and I tipped my head back and sang three hallelujahs."

The chapters of the novel alternate between Patience's point of view and Sarah's. Through this device, the author succeeds in giving a clear picture of how each woman really thinks and how each grows from her experiences.

Slightly marring the gentle tone of the story is the description of the physical relationship between the two women, their "special terms." An element of restraint would perhaps have been more in keeping with the puritanical atmosphere in which the story is set.

The style is compressed, yet beneath its terseness and homely New England speech, there is a delicate irony and humor, as well as a spirit of intense emotion. — M.J.

Crushed Children

By ANNE McDOUGALL

James Reaney's plays have that most satisfactory of all characteristics — they seem to have been written because they were needed.

Then you discover, if you didn't already know, that this well-known Canadian poet and short-story writer has been working for years with a Saturday morning workshop in London, Ont. He and children of all ages, many well past adolescence, have been experimenting with the basics of drama. In order to get what he wanted, Reaney wrote many of the plays himself.

Reaney, as a poet, is concerned with the art in a human soul that can develop and flower if it is not stifled along the way. He finds this quality, for obvious reasons, more often in children than adults. This collection of plays is centred in this theme. It forms the second in a drama series started by New Press.

Two of the plays, "Easter Egg" and "Three Desks," have been performed but never published. "Kildeer" was produced in 1960, published in 1962, and is revised here, as Reaney explains, "after I had been composing more whirling and fluid plays, influenced by continuous contact with workshop situations."

It is a very useful edition for anyone teaching drama in schools or colleges, and the plays are a delight.

Reaney concentrates on children, or child-like souls, who have been crushed and almost extinguished by the at-best conventional and at-worst cruel and evil forces of perverted lives about them. Kenneth, in "Easter Egg," is being pushed towards being declared an idiot-boy until a courageous step-sister saves him. In "Kildeer" three young people have been smothered by a vicious set of adult action; in this play the adults themselves are shown to have been warped in their own growing-up days. In "Three Desks" Reaney stages a musical chairs of desks in a small university in northern Canada. Tension grows as a charlatan professor torments an awkward but honorable old type and a newcomer arrives to occupy the third desk.

This summary gives no idea of the ludicrous situations these people get into or the witty and wry dialogue which is the mark of these scripts. Reaney runs through a gamut of parties, pranks, toys, pet animals and leg-pulling. Because he is also pulling his own leg, Reaney has disarmed critics who have called him melodramatic or deliberately awkward by the endearing freshness, candor and originality of his work. Reaney believes in play, apart from drama. When it comes off, after all, there are very few of us who don't.

The edition has a short, lively introduction by Reaney himself as well as brief author's notes before each play. There is also an excellent analysis of Reaney's work by the editor of the series, Brian Parker. In the afterword he looks at some of the elements in "the artful artlessness of one of Canada's major poets."

He Touched Millions and Inspired Many

By AB KENT

It is a year since Louis Armstrong died, empty months in which surprisingly little has been written about him, the most important man of jazz and modern music this century has produced.

A noteworthy exception is a book published in Britain late last year which tries to put the life of Louis into perspective. The commendable effort risks making the man, whose name is synonymous with jazz everywhere, into a figure larger than life. In this case there is no harm done; Louis was indeed larger than life while living and will remain so in history.

He accomplished an incredible lot as a jazz musician, composer, innovator, showman, actor and singer in a span of 71 very busy, mostly happy and frequently unrewarding years. He touched millions, and like the classical exponents before him, inspired others to greatness.

A personal risk in reading this book is giving in to nostalgia, equally applicable to old and young reaching 50 years into living memory. For the evidence is ample.

Probably one out of three "favorite" pop tunes is an Armstrong classic: St. Louis Blues, Rockin' Chair, Pennies from Heaven, Ain't Misbehavin', Blueberry Hill, Sleepy Time Down South, Gone Fishin', La Vie en Rose, Mack the Knife, What a Wonderful World . . .

Even the second-to-last generation, for all its sophistication and changing taste in music, will have to concede some nostalgic bias because Louis Armstrong was playing jazz trumpet virtually until his death and counting the most modern music in his repertoire.

Intensely professional, he earned immortality mainly as an instrumentalist, interpreter, composer and singer, his influence reaching into every facet of jazz and popular music since prohibition. He was also warmly human.

This book bares much of Louis and his music that has been obscured by romantic legend. The English collaborators, themselves long students of jazz musicology, perhaps come closer to an objective, definitive view of Satchmo than any previous literature.

Their work, with many photographs, includes letters and interviews, the observations of people who were close to Louis, which frequently amplify aspects of bygone times from New Orleans, 1900, to the final engagement in the Empire room, Waldorf Astoria Hotel, 1971.

How many musical styles and eras does the period cover? At least a dozen. But it also covers the gangster years, racism, the drug scene, the development of recordings, pioneer radio and television broadcasting, the first sound track motion pictures and the concert-scale road tour of national and international proportions.

Armstrong touched a part of all these things and they touched him, but he kept music uppermost. He was no traditionalist, though he never forgot his classical upbringing and always strove for purity in applying life experience to his innovations.

He proved quite simply that jazz need not be confined to blues or "darky music." Popular songs from Pops' trumpet became hot, soulful, syncopated, happy or whatever jazz he deemed them to be. New Orleans spirit lived in his music.

And wasn't it Louis who once when asked, "What is jazz?" replied, "If you have to ask, you ain't got it," or something equally profound? He did say this:

"When I pick up that horn, the world's behind me and I don't concentrate on nothing but that horn . . . I don't feel no different about it now than I did when I was playing in New Orleans. No, that's my living and my life."

Phillip Larkin, in 1970, wrote: "It is we who have been privileged to share this century with such a perpetual fountain of original excitement, beauty and good humor. It is we who are the lucky-so-and-so's."

Armstrong inspired greats in their own right — Henry "Red" Allen, Kaminsky, Rex Stewart, Roy Eldridge, Bix Beiderbecke, Bunny Berigan. They idolized him.

Drawing by Dave Glover

No one would consider Louis' voice in any way musical, yet he was also the most influential jazz vocalist and one of the most prolific record-makers with more than 1,000 issued and some still not released.

The records began March 31, 1923, when Armstrong recorded Chimes Blues as a member of King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band. Recordings marched on with the bands of Fletcher Henderson, Lil Hardin, Luis Russell, the Hot Five, the Hot Seven, the Dorsey brothers — through the 30s and 40s to the 23-year All Stars series.

He appeared in 35 films between 1931 and 1969, including New Orleans, The Strip, The Glenn Miller Story, High Society, Paris Blues and, possibly, his most famous, Hello Dolly!

Jazz festivals, Carnegie Hall, the White House, state department tours and, since 1950, many TV appearances mixed with his regular engagements and continental tours kept him constantly on the move, just as he had travelled back and forth across the U.S. in younger days with less fame and meagre rewards.

Not long before he died of a heart attack on July 6, 1971, Louis looked back to count his blessings: "Life's always been good," he wrote. It's a wise man who can say that, then leave an epitaph in the currently popular ballad with the final lyric, "the kind of lovesong I want the world to remember me by." That says it all.

HUNG UP ON EACH OTHER, this pair of Barnaby sheep at the public zoo in Louisville, Kentucky, put their heads together over something ... important, obviously. They're looking slightly sheepish, however .., hooked horns obviously weren't in the shooting script. (AP Wirephoto).

'Pill-Pop' Curb Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Doctors and advertisers need to show more responsibility in curbing the worrisome North American phenomenon of a "pill-popping population," says Dr. J. D. Wallace, secretary general of the Canadian Medical Association.

In an article in the association's Journal, Dr. Wallace says advertising promotes the idea that people can take a "pill, potion or beverage," then "sail through life on a euphoric pink cloud without a care in the world."

"Many of those who have attempted to achieve that perpetual happy state on a do-it-yourself basis have suffered disastrous consequences."

Dr. Wallace said that a great majority of the products are relatively safe but there are two factors that introduce complications.

One was a tendency for individuals to experiment with a variety of medications at the same time. For example, a person might take a pep-up pill, then later another to go to sleep, another to "keep regular," and another for something else.

"Heaven only knows what confused physiological messages are transmitted throughout the body by some of these self-administered medicinal conglomerates."

FALL INTO TRAP

But another, equally dangerous complication is that some doctors help people to "fall into the pill-popping pen because people now come expecting to get a prescription or because the doctor now has such a wide variety of useful drugs available.

proposal, on prescription only, a wide variety of emotional, psychological and physiological crutches that will at least temporarily relieve the symptoms that trouble a patient and perhaps improve his fective member of society."

To control the over-the-counter preparations, Dr. Wallace recommends a cose of ethical advertising and control over the quality and quantity of promotional exposure.

And he urges doctors not to "drift" into a situation where the use of drugs is harmful. Professionals and governmental controls have had to be placed on the use of amphetamines, which were misused for ready treatment of obesity.

Dr. Wallace said it is better to find and eradicate the cause rather than to provide a "temporary and potentially dangerous crutch."

Assorted Grease-Monkey Work on Old Locomotive

TORONTO (CP) — Old 1057, a coal-powered locomotive that once steamed and grunted to tie Canada together, may soon chug a link between the nation's past and its present.

The big eight-wheeler, laid off in 1960 as sleek diesel-powered engines took over the steel of Canada's railroads, survives thanks to the Ontario Rail Association, an unlikely group of roundhouse grease-monkeys.

Its members include a draftsman, a computer programmer and a policeman who visit 1057 just about every night to repair its tired wheels and stokers.

1973 GOAL SET

The association members don overalls after their regular jobs to tackle the grimy task of restoring another steam locomotive inside a Canadian Pacific Railway roundhouse in Toronto.

The association is a non-profit organization of nearly 300 members who have a 1973 goal of a live museum and a steam railway operating with renovated engines and coaches on an eight-mile track running north from Georgetown.

John Coulter of the association looked at 1057 and said:

"If something like that becomes destroyed and lost, there is no way that anything re-created in the future will be able to have that intangible quality of actually having been a part of our history."

In daylight hours, Mr. Coulter is vice-president of a development firm's technical service company.

James Brown, association president, said that although no formal agreement has been reached with Canadian National Railways, railway officials have expressed enthusiasm for the idea of granting track rights on a rarely-used portion of rail line between Georgetown and Barrie.

The association plans to run the trains on what it calls the Credit Valley Railroad.

RESTORE COACHES

Besides 1057, the association is renovating 12 coaches, two cabooses, one tank car, three combinatios baggage and coach cars and another historic steam locomotive — CPR's No. 136 — which was built in 1883.

No. 136 is being renovated in the Milton garage of a heavy-equipment company whose president, Sherwood Hume, is an association director.

One of the 12 coaches is the Ontario Northland Railway's 58-year-old executive coach Temagami, donated by the railway. It has polished, rosewood-panelled staterooms and lounge.

Several other companies have donated items.

Police Chief John Calder of Ancaster, a director, is surveying the manpower skills of volunteers and organizing a training program.

Because the Credit Valley Railroad will be running on CN tracks, the steam operation will have to meet the regulations of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Cod-Ear Jewelry

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — You've got to be kidding, who ever heard of ear-rings and tie clasps made from codfish ears? In fact, who's seen a codfish with ears?

Two local residents, Rex Andrews and his wife Gerta, can answer both questions. They have been making the jewelry and, yes, codfish do have ears.

It started as a project to get keepsakes for those attending a national meeting here last summer of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire and developed into a method of raising funds for IODE projects, including two isolated schools they sponsor in the province.

The tiny shell-shaped ears, removed from inside the fish's head where they act as a balancing mechanism, are dried and polished before they are mounted on ear-ring clips and tie clasps.

MAN HAD IDEA

The idea came from Mr. Andrews, whose wife is a national councillor of the IODE. He is quick to point out that she pressed him into service and he isn't an IODE member.

The ears are cut from fish at a local processing plant and are cleaned, polished and mounted by other members of the group. They retail for between $1.35 and $1.75 each, depending on the mark-up by individual store owners.

No estimate of the funds raised by the project has been released, but an IODE spokesman said it provides money for their charities, including schools they sponsor in the isolated communities of Makkovik in Labrador and Gray River on the Burin Peninsula. The group provides the schools with such items as stencil equipment, books, sports equipment and, in one case, a backboard.

To the People of Victoria

Your city, one of the most beautiful in the world, is being slowly destroyed. Most of you live in Victoria because of its beauty and charm. There are other cities where, perhaps, you could make a great deal more money. The acquisition of money is not the only goal in life, however, but to a few it is everything. These few, who care nothing for beauty, are destroying what you love and have worked so hard to find and to enjoy.

The Reid Centre will dominate the Inner Harbour of Victoria. Although, architecturally, it is not bad, it is disastrous for its proposed location. It will not relate, in any way, to the existing structures, many of which have great architectural and historic value.

Since total design is my profession, I offered to present a design of the Inner Harbour, without charge, showing a structure that would be compatible with the existing buildings on Wharf Street. With the use of brick, wood and shake roofs, it could blend in with the other buildings surrounding the harbour and, if any high-rise structure on this site could be tolerated, was the only solution.

There were even alternatives to a hotel structure which would have been economically feasible for the developer. My suggestions were ignored.

In this matter, as in so many others, you, the people of Victoria, have been ignored. Your tastes, your opinions and your wishes have been treated with scorn. A development has been forced down your throat and you are going to have to live with it unless you take action.

If someone defaced your home you would protest. They are defacing your city!

TENNESSEE WILLIAMS:

NEW YORK — Tennessee Williams is talking, slowly, softly, intently.

"When you've really had a mental crackup, it's a great catharsis of all the things that arsis of all the things that have troubled you. That is, if you survive it, and I barely did . . ." The words trail off.

The Williams spectacle of brilliant playwriting, physical illness, emotional turmoil and sybaritic splash has for a quarter-century delighted, distressed and diverted multitudes.

"I feel I have lived a full life."

The distinguished dramatist last spring passed his 61st birthday. His latest play, Small Craft Warnings, more recently premiered Off-Broadway. The events together enticed him from preferred seclusion for a far-ranging conversation.

"I remember what Gore Vidal told me. Vidal said, "You're personal publicity has been so terrible you can never get good notices again in your life in America.'

"Well, it all has been deplorable, grotesque, disgusting. And not true, except bits of it. "It's as if there was a demolition squad pursuing me, constantly at my heels, trying to devastate my character."

Lest that sound paranoiac, the stocky little man from Columbus, Miss., cites several late-vintage magazine profiles of him, filled with what he terms waspish anecdotes.

The mixed critical reception that greeted Small Craft Warnings — many reviewers found that play's characters were ghosts from dramas past-draws the rejoinder:

"What do they want, blood? At 61, I don't have blood to give. I gave them good writing, I achieved my purpose, which was to write a play that corresponded to a short story."

In appearance, Williams projects augmented confidence. He has sworn off the more exotic medicaments indulged in of yore, has "two or three drinks and I'm a great lover of wine. I do get tired at night." He writes every morning.

"I love travelling most of all. You can write anywhere you have a piece of paper."

But Williams has no intention of turning hermit.

"My doctor told me I should go to Key West Fla. and live like a crocodile." His arms paw the air in mime of a lethargic swamp dweller. "What was my answer? Well, I'm not doing it, am I".

"I have found again the ability to be surprised, which I lost during the 1960s. I feel much freer with people and I feel I have more friends."

What has it all to do with the inner man, the creator whose lyrical imagery has ever been strongly etched with burning compassion? Do demons of anguish still haunt him?

"Oh, you mean my neuroses. No, no, no, no, they don't any longer. I don't permit them to." As a technician, he reports another change. During the middle years Williams kept compulsively working and remorking plays, even after they had been produced and published.

"If critics constantly compare my work with past performance, then it is because they are totally unaquainted with the history of most American writers.

"American writers frequently do their most spectacular work early in their career. If they've got any sense, and their work declines, they quit.

"Now, I've never felt my work has declined to that degree. I couldn't quit anyway, because writing is my greatest satisfaction in life. I have others, but writing is the greatest. Why should I quit?"

All that he writes hereafter for the stage the author says, will be first done far from Broadway, upon which he exploded with The Glass Menagerie' in 1945. Two Pulitzer prizes and a dozen productions of other works over the next two decades solidified his artistic eminence.

"I'm not going to go through the hell of a New York production again if I can help it. It's absolute hell. Off-Broadway has the same strain.

Summer Musical Program Under Way Next Week

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Victoria's greatest summer in its musical annals begins next week and builds dramatically a week later with what amounts to a double festival in progress.

On Saturday, July 15, the first of 12 free promenade sunset concerts performed by Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra takes place in Centennial Square. Concert time will be 6 p.m.

On the following day, Sunday, the concert will be repeated in the Cameron Pavilion in Beacon Hill Park at 2 p.m.

The open-air concerts will feature popular symphonic, opera and ballet music, with occasional guest artists.

For the first two concerts, a distinguished duo will be on the program.

An enchanting and brilliant violinist, Masuko Ushioda, last winter won a standing ovation when she appeared with the symphony. Next week she returns with her husband, Laurence Lesser, an American cellist bearing an international reputation.

The pair, who are at present teaching a summer school in Oregon, will be guest stars of the Centennial Square and Beacon Hill Park concerts, performing the Brahms double concerto for violin and cello with orchestra.

Also on the program will be Rossini's overture, The Italian Girl in Algiers, Three Slavonic Dances by Dvorak and Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

Others who will fill solo spots during the series include an outstanding Canadian soprano, Ricki Turofsky, and principals from the orchestra.

Balance of the concerts to be presented in Heritage Court in the Provincial Museum precinct — Christ Church Cathedral if it rains — will take place on Mondays and Wednesdays from July 17 through Aug. 16.

There will be two different programs on each evening, starting at 6 and 7:30 p.m.

A shell for the orchestra is now in process of being built at Heritage Court.

Victoria Summer Festival Society, which is presenting the concert series, suggests that those who prefer to be seated rather than promenading, should bring folding chairs.

Under a different umbrella, but also involving the Victoria Symphony and Maestro Gati to a large extent, is the international series of concerts that begins in McPherson Playhouse July 20 with the Anna Wyman contemporary creative dance group from Vancouver.

This is a concurrent festival initiated through the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts and which will bring to the city a fascinating array of prestigious artists.

Among them will be the Belgian pianist Eduardo del Pueyo, who will play Beethoven's Emperor Concerto with the orchestra July 23, cellist Janos Starker, the world's greatest double bass player, Gary Karr, and several others.

Tickets for this series are available now at McPherson Playhouse with a special discount for those who become season subscribers for any five or more concerts.

Students and senior citizens will receive a $1 discount on any seat.

There will be altogether 14 concerts ending with a visit from the Pacific Salt Jazz Sextet, Aug. 22.

W. C. Fields disc By Rich Little

By RON ROBINSON
CJVI Program Director

Canada's foremost impressionist, Rich Little, is rushing into release his latest album, "W. C. Fields for President," coincidental with the U.S. election campaigns. The album is based on a best selling hardcover book "Fields for President," taken from the writings of the comedy star of the 30's and 40's. Portraying W. C. Fields in the U.S. political scene might be safer for Little than when he, as a Canadian citizen, took a crack or two at the then President Lyndon Johnson, and was cancelled out of the remainder of his engagement at a big New York City nightspot.

The Carpenters were very successful on their recent visit to Japan, selling out in both Tokyo and Osaka. Incidentally, Hallmark greeting cards have just acquired the rights to the lyrics from songs by such artists as the Carpenters, Paul Williams, Cat Stevens, etc., for cards, posters, etc. Seems that today's song lyrics are the poetry of our time.

Dies of 'Shame'

TAIPEI (Reuter) — Feng Chih-xuan, 21, arrested for stealing cars, hanged himself in a prison cell with a rope fashioned out of strips torn from his shirt, police reported. He left a note saying he was sorry for bringing shame to his parents.

Alberta Pushes Bicycling Safety

EDMONTON (CP — The Alberta Safety Council hopes the cycling public will voluntarily start wearing protective helmets before the government is forced to introduce compulsory legislation.

Ken Nelson, the council's public relations officer, said Friday if the "bike phenomenon grows, it seems inevitable the government will have to take steps" to protect cyclists from themselves.

CRITICS SLAM MDs' WRITING

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The traditional bad handwriting of doctors is being attacked by a House of Representatives committee investigating pharmaceutical operations.

It reports that druggists waste hundreds of hours every year getting in touch with doctors to verify prescriptions.

"Handwritten prescriptions are a continual source of potential error in patient treatment," the report says.

The committee recommended that doctors print or type prescriptions. The Australian Pharmacy Guild has been pressing for this.

Its spokesman says: "A lot of drugs have similar names and it is very difficult to distinguish some drugs because of bad handwriting. Every time a chemist is unsure of which drug to prescribe he has to check with the doctor. This involves a loss of the chemist's time and causes inconvenience to the patient."

A spokesman for the Australian Medical Association said doctors write prescriptions because it is against the law to type them.

He added "The majority of doctors are also against typing prescriptions because it would make forgery easy."

'A CLOCKWORK ORANGE'

Kubrick Serves Vicious Slice of Life

A Film Review
By WAYNE HARDING

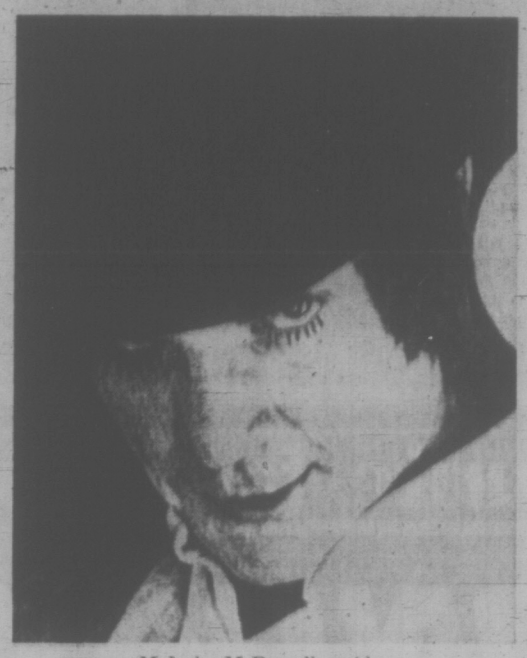
There has been some argument about how the film A Clockwork Orange deviates from the book upon which it is based.

Even the principals, novelist Anthony Burgess and producer-director Stanley Kubrick, have occasionally taken part in the dispute.

Their difference isn't how to tell a story. Both are excellent craftsmen in their own media and seem to have considerable respect for one another. The difference is more profound.

Burgess' novel is about the leader of a gang of toughs in a not-distant future society. He kills, rapes and robs for thrills and with considerable style. Eventually he is imprisoned, then reformed through an experimental brainwashing technique. He suffers for his inability to do wrong and in the end is returned to a state of free choice.



Malcolm McDowell as Alex

The book is essentially a conservative statement. It loathes the growth and pervasiveness of the power of the state. It deplores the decline of personal freedom, specifically the freedom to choose between good and evil.

"A Clockwork Orange was intended to be a sort of tract, even a sermon, on the importance of the power of choice," Burgess has written.

"My hero or anti-hero, Alex, is very vicious, perhaps even impossibly so, but his viciousness is not the product of genetic or social conditioning: it is his own thing, embarked on in full awareness."

As if to underscore his point, Burgess added an extra chapter to his novel which was originally written in 1961. (The extra chapter did not appear in the U.S. edition nor in the subsequent paperback, however.) In this final chapter, Alex eventually chooses the path of righteousness having had his ability to choose returned to him.

Kubrick ignored that last chapter. His film leaves Alex as happy and vicious a scoundrel as it first found him.

All the argument about freedom of choice, Burgess' "sermon", is condensed into a few unconvincing complaints by a prison chaplain who witnesses the processes under which Alex is brainwashed out of his evil inclinations.

For Kubrick, Alex's drama is a slice of projected life. The violent acts he commits and the motives behind those acts pass like landscape over the passionless celluloid. It may be amazing that people can be so ruthless, that life should create such creatures, but it is all very real and acceptable, and part of a greater whole.

One cannot help but feel that this sense of a continuity which exists beyond the storylines is created in the name of fate. It's Kubrick's worldview again — the same one we saw in Space Odyssey 2001. It's that awesome fate, that conceives Alex's redemption-maker in whose torrent man's decisions are but tiny splashes. It's a Miltonic eye that conceives Alex's redeption on film.

The surrealism of free-will is converted with cunning style into the surrealism of fatalism.

To do this, Kubrick exploits his subject and his techniques well. He uses broad strokes, demanding that his viewer accept leaps from the mundane to the grand, from the simple to the bizarre as it fits his heavy schedule. And it all works.

Malcolm McDowell, as the evil Alex, suits the filmmaker's purpose well. Despite his viciousness, he is quite likeable and charming. Burgess argues that "if we are going to love mankind we will have to love Alex as a not unrepresentative member of it." Kubrick does not argue. He presents Alex as part of the bitter-sweet furniture of the universe.

One aspect of the film that seems to disturb some viewers is the jargon of the toughs. It's called Nadsat — from an approximation of the Russian for teen. It's explained in the book this way: "Odd bits of old rhyming slang. A bit of gypsy talk too, but most of the roots are Slav. Propaganda. Subliminal penetration." It's the jargon of the synthesized youth of the future — the Alex's waiting for their choices.

Famed Glasgow Choir Starting Tour Here

One of the world's most renowned mixed choirs is the Glasgow Phoenix Choir — formerly the Orpheus — which was brought to its unique position in the musical world by its distinguished conductor, Sir Hugh Roberton.

Sir Hugh retired 20 years ago but his choir has continued its great tradition both at home and on tour.

On July 31 the Scottish ensemble will give a single concert in Victoria, mid-point of its first North American tour.

The concert will take place at First United Church and is sponsored jointly by St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society and the Arion Male Voice Choir.

Tickets are limited and at a sing price of $7. They are available from Western Music, Holyrood House, Stevenson's Chocolates, Catherine Wilson's Fort Street store and members of the Arion Choir.

There are altogether some 180 persons in the touring group, including 10 of Scotland's champion Highland dancers. Billeting arrangements are now being made and anyone interested in providing accommodation should phone Bert Storar, 382-1611.

City MDs Fill In

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said today enthusiasm he has met among local doctors suggests they will join to help isolated communities which lose their physicians.

Dr. Gordon Lott said such projects might be organized on a continuing basis provided enough warning of impending need was given so doctors could plan breaks in heavy schedules.

He was commenting on the co-operative effort under way locally to supply pairs of doctors in two-week shifts this summer for Mackenzie, a community of about 4,000 which is 100 miles north of Prince George.

Mountie Drama Ditched

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC has scrapped plans for a $150,000 television drama which had been planned to mark next year's 100th anniversary of the RCMP, CBC officials say.

Grahame Woods, the writer for the project, described the action as "a Jalna backlash."

"The CBC now is very concerned about spending too much money in any one thing."

The RCMP drama was to have been a 90-minute production called The Long March. It was to have involved 10 leading actors, 30 supporting players and at least 100 extras. Four weeks of location shooting in Alberta had been planned for the end of the summer.

Summer Shows

Summer theatre entertainment continues next week with Jerry Gosley's Smile Show nightly at 8 at McPherson Playhouse and repertory performances also at 8 p.m. at Bastion Studio Theatre, 538 Yates.

There is no performance there Monday but the play, The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail alternates Tuesday through Saturday with Bastion's musical revue.

Music Brings People Together In Therapy for Mentally Sick

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Got a problem? Try a bit of music as therapy. It's bound to help.

Based on that premise, many emotionally-disturbed, handicapped and retarded patients in hospitals across North America are being helped into revovering from their illnesses.

Today, Dr. Richard M. Graham of the University of Georgia was in Victoria to explain how. He also gave a lecture at the University of Victoria this afternoon.

The way Graham explains it, music is a form of communication between human beings and is performed when people want to be at their best.

It is a truly social activity, he said, and requires interaction between people for its full appreciation.

These aspects of music as an activity enable therapists to use it to bring out socially acceptable behavior patterns in disturbed persons.

The music therapist, Graham said, works to complement the treatment being given by a conventional psychiatrist. His services are prescribed, much as other specialists are assigned to individual patients where the doctor in charge feels it will be beneficial to the patient under his care.

Participation is a musical activity, be it listening, playing or even constructing instruments, brings out a feeling of co-operation between those participating. As Graham says: "It is very difficult to be hostile when you are part of a group singing."

But Graham does not believe it is the actual sound of the music itself which proves beneficial — it is the interaction between the participants in the musical setting.

The treatment is used for both young and old patients, he said, with treatment of elderly patients based primarily on the use of nostalgia to bring out out responses.

GRAHAM
. . . like David's harp

This aspect of music therapy requires the therapist and those assisting him to research the patients' background to find out the type of music which he experienced in his adolescence — which Graham said is the period of music's strongest influence.

When the period music is researched, the therapist allows the patient to experience it, which in most cases is the patient's first experience of the music since he heard it in his youth.

Graham said the most patients begin to recall almost immediately the music that is being played and will respond to it. In some cases, the response is the first from the patient in many sessions of previous treatment.

After the patient has established acceptance of the therapist, it is possible for the therapist to relate the music to more general areas of behavior, thereby starting the patient on the road to more acceptable social behavior and attitudes.

Music therapy is not a new phenomenon, Graham said. It has been used in the United States as an established practice since the 1880s. Some experts, he said, even point to the biblical anecdote of David playing his harp to soothe the angry Saul as the origins of music therapy.

But whenever it started, statistical research has shown it to be effective, Graham said. There are very few cases, he said, where some sort of positive improvement has not been shown by the use of music therapy.

The very nature of music, Graham said, lends itself to improving relationships between people and specifically, between therapist and patient.

If you are raising happy children, could you take into your family's heart a youngster who isn't quite sure what happiness is?

Youngsters like these, between 10 and 18, without roots, need a good home more than anything else.

This is not an easy assignment, because these are uneasy youngsters. Their biggest problem has probably been that, up to now, no one has really cared what happened to them.

No mother fixed that girl's hair in ribboned pigtails when she was little, or held her close, or told her she was really pretty. That older boy will fiercely deny that he's scared stiff those adolescent pimples will never go away. Chances are, he's also been on pot. And the little guy isn't doing too well at school. He could be a drop-out in a couple of years. These are the problems of insecure lives.

Do these children need rigid discipline? No. Not exactly. If that was the complete answer we could put them in an institution.

Do they need pampering? No. Not exactly. Rather, they need someone to listen . . . and hear. They need appreciation of their potential . . . encouragement for their positive responses. And kindly but firm direction from someone they can eventually believe has their best interests at heart.

Success with them won't happen overnight. It won't happen in a month or more. These children can be resentful. They're wary. They've been let down too often before.

But if you already have children about the same age . . . and if you've gained and held their respect as a result of a lifetime of patience, understanding, work and love . . . maybe you have courage enough to try it again . . . this time with two strikes against you.

What's in it for you? Ask any parents who have adopted someone (although you are not being asked to adopt in this case). Perhaps you will put stars in a girl's eyes or guide a boy into a career.

You could gain a son, or a daughter. You may even become friends, and learn together.

If you are interested in making a home for such a youngster, call or write for an appointment . . . at the same time telling us a bit about your family. We'll pay room and board for any youngster we place. Meantime your enquiry will be treated in confidence.

Keep the Car On the Road . . . Or Else

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Drive off the road and you'll probably run into one.

That is the theme of a campaign being waged by a group of Victoria young people to educate the public about the dangers of roadside hazards.

We all know about roadside hazards, those light posts, telephone poles and retaining walls that go whizzing past when one is travelling at speed on the highway or on a city street.

Sometimes they seem a bit too close for comfort, like those times when that one extra drink has taken the edge off the reaction time or when the maniac in the other lane is way over on the wrong side of the road.

But even at the best of times, under the best driving conditions, roadside hazards are just that — hazards.

The four young people working on the project are all former University of Victoria students. They are being funded by a $4,150 grant from the Automobile Insurance Bureau of B.C. and will be working on the project for the rest of the summer.

Their aim is to bring to the attention of the public and of municipal and provincial authorities the problems roadside hazards are posing to the motoring public in terms of damage to cars, damage to property and loss of life.

Although they realize that it would be financially prohibitive to have all roadside hazards moved back from the road immediately, the idea is for plans to be far enough ahead to allow for their placement in a safe place.

They will be approaching local municipal governments soon to talk about future placements of power poles and light standards.

Jameson said the group's project is one of three ways to make driving safer. The first method is driver education, which includes the handling and prevention of drinking drivers.

The second is making the car safer and the third is making the road safer, by eliminating roadside hazards for one thing.

Part of the group's work has been to visit scenes of past accidents and to see whether work has been done to improve the scene from a safety point of view.

One scene, Hillside and Wark, where a car collided with a telephone pole in March of this year, shows that nothing has changed since then. The pole, naturally, is still there. A few pieces of glass and debris from the accident are still scattered around its base.

Another scene is on McKenzie Ave. where an accident claimed the life of a local man three years ago. The scene is unchanged except for a row of eight reflecting stakes along the shoulder of the road where the man's car went off and hit another telephone pole. The telephone pole was replaced, in exactly the same spot.

One man is not alive today because of it.

Firemen Waiting With Demands

The president of the Victoria firemen's union said today a strike by firefighters would be in no one's best interests and he has a proposal "I don't see how the city can turn down."

But Fred "Whitey" Severson said he will wait until Mayor Peter Pollen returns from vacation before presenting it because "he seems to make all the decisions."

Pollen returns from Europe July 18.

Beyond saying it relates to strike action by firemen and he hopes fire departments regionally and perhaps across the province might follow suit, Severson declined further details.

Firemen, who for years were prohibited from striking, were granted that right about three years ago.

The contract between the city and the 104 men in Victoria Firefighters' Local 730 expired March 31 and Severson said today negotiations to date "have got nowhere."

He just laughed when asked to confirm the city had initially proposed a 5 per cent pay cut this year for firemen.

Severson said the city had proposed a 6½ per cent increase over two years with nothing this year, arguing that the last wage hike in the expiring contract represented the increase for 1972.

The union was asking, as it has in the past, for parity with Vancouver where firemen are paid $23 a month more. A first-class firefighter in Victoria is now paid $819 a month.

Severson said the union was agreeable to reaching parity with Vancouver over a five-year period.

In another labor dispute involving city hall, a spokesman for the city police union said today the city had taken unilateral action in calling for a mediation officer after bargaining broke down Thursday.

The next step is up to the union membership which is meeting Tuesday, said lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood, who is representing the 125 Victoria policemen.

While there is no way the union will appear before the Mediation Commission, that doesn't mean it won't deal with a mediation officer, he added.

The union is seeking parity with Vancouver, which would mean an increase of a little more than 12 per cent in a nine-month contract.

SIGN HEARING CALLED

A special meeting of city council's public works committee has been called for Tuesday, to enable representatives of the sign and tourist industries to express their views on the proposed amendments to Victoria's sign bylaw.

Both groups affected are expected to voice concern at the changes, particularly the proposed ban on all third-party advertising.

This refers to signs and boards advertising products and businesses not directly related to the property where they are located.

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has already urged that the tourist industry be exempted from the legislation, while sign companies have complained that their business would be severely curtailed.

However, committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton said Friday he is sure council has no wish to impose hardships on anyone through the proposed legislation.

Frampton said he expects all "paper-type" signs will be eliminated, but added that he does not object to the three-faced revolving signs which, with landscaping provided in front, offer a "nice type of advertising."

REID PETITION GROWS

Opponents of the Reid Centre who are staging a last-ditch attempt to block the development have so far collected 1,200 signatures on a protest petition.

But Gene Miller, one of the organizers of the campaign, said Friday "at least 5,000" names are needed on the petition which will be handed to Mayor Peter Pollen on his return from Europe in 10 days.

The petition will ask Pollen to use his powers under the Municipal Act to return the bylaw for the land-use contract to city council for reconsideration. It will also seek a referendum to determine whether ratepayers approve or oppose the development.

Miller said the drive is going "well but slowly," and asked for more volunteers to canvass residential areas and key street corners.

He said he manned the corner of Fort and Government on three consecutive days and was "amazed" at the response he received.

To comply with the act's provisions, Pollen would have to send the bylaw back to council within 30 days of its approval — June 22. The mayor returns to duty July 18.

Meanwhile, Ald. Tom Christie as acting mayor could sign the document, but he declined to say today whether he would do so or wait for Pollen to sign.

"I would meet that situation if and when it arises," Christie said.

Mayor Challenged On 'Last Chance'

Ald. Brian Smith today challenged Mayor Frances Elford's claim that the controversial Farmer Construction Ltd. swap proposal is the last chance Oak Bay will have to get a recreation centre.

The firm proposed that it be given the valuable riding academy site on which to build three 12-storey towers and 50 townhouses in exchange for building a curling-ice hockey centre on municipal-owned land near the Oak Bay junior and senior high schools.

Mayor Elford has been leading a campaign to have the matter re-introduced after council voted 4-3 against the swap.

Smith said, "The present issue in Oak Bay is not whether we are to have a recreation centre now or never.

"The issue is rather — should Oak Bay council hand over valuable municipal land to a developer and rezone to his order in return for construction of an ice rink-curling rink complex.

"The complex will be built to the design specifications and under the control of the same developer. Do you think this 'swap' proposition is the proper way for an elected council to carry on public business? I do not.

"The swap proposal must be examined as a business venture and not a philanthropic gesture." (Mayor Elford has stated publicly that Farmers are "purely altruistic" in their offer).

Smith, stating that if the swap was accepted, council would have to rezone the riding academy land in line with the firm's desires, said:

"That is, there would be built on that site three apartment towers — each 12 storeys high, each tower of a total approximate height (including elevator housing) of 129 feet."

With the townhouses, Smith said, it would mean 800 people living on the 9.3-acre site.

"The recreation complex which Farmer Construction Ltd. has offered to build at another municipal site will be constructed according to the design specifications and supervision primarily of Farmer Construction. It will doubtless be in accordance with recreation requirements but it will not be designed by a municipally-engaged architect nor supervised by one, nor will it be built following competitive bidding."

Smith said that many months have been spent by council on planning a recreation complex, with architect John Di Castri commissioned to draw up plans for the full complex, including a swimming pool.

The complex, he said, in comparison with Farmer's, would be designed and supervised architecturally on behalf of the municipality.

"I feel that this is the way an elected municipal council should proceed, rather than entering into arrangements with a single developer to swap municipal land in return for building a recreation complex."

IRA Man Visiting Here Charges Canada 'Guilty'

By WALTER McKINNON
Times Staff

Canada is guilty of complicity in war crimes being committed by British occupational forces in Northern Ireland, a young spokesman for the official wing of the Irish Republican Army changed here Friday.

"British soldiers are indulging in brutality, torture . . . insults such as urination on prisoners," he said. And Canada must share the blame, because British troops are being trained on Canadian soil.

Sean Keane, a 22-year-old Belfast man who says he has been a member of the official IRA for three years, said in Victoria during an interview that "Canada, the Canadian government, is condoning this sort of thing (the alleged atrocities) by helping them."

British troops, he said, are trained at the Suffield defence research station in Southern Alberta in such areas as "chemical and biological warfare."

Those same troops, he continued, then serve in Northern Ireland where they are engaged in chemical warfare — the use of tear gas against Irish dissidents.

Keane, a graduate in English and political science from the University College of Dublin, said he is in Canada at the invitation of an Irish sympathetic organization at Suffield and the Vancouver Irish Republican Club.

He was in Victoria Friday in an unofficial capacity, to visit local sympathizers.

"What we (the IRA) are trying to point out is that the Canadian government by its actions is helping, is condoning British action in Northern Ireland."

KEANE
. . . complicity in crimes

Keane said one of the most frequent atrocities by the British on Northern Irish prisoners is "intensive psychological interrogation."

"And it's not just for interrogation, for information. It's to break the man's spirit."

Keane said the issue of Canadian complicity in Northern Ireland was brought to the floor of the Commons by Vancouver NDP member Grace MacInnis. She was told by the minister of defence, he says, that British troops trained in Canada were slated for NATO postings.

"The implication was that there are two separate British armies," Keane said, "one for NATO and another for North Ireland.

"Troops being trained in Canada will see duty in Northern Ireland, I maintain."

Keane, who is now bound for New York, headquarters in North America of the Irish Republican Clubs, says he isn't raising funds.

"I'm talking to some friends, people who have helped raise funds in the past, but I won't be attending any fund-raising meetings myself."

Keane spoke in Suffield Sunday and on the steps of the courthouse in Vancouver the previous Friday. He says he'll be staying in New York, primarily organizing fund-raising groups, until the end of August, when he will return to Belfast.

What does he think will be the ultimate resolution of the Irish problem?

He doesn't know, but he hopes it will be "a united Ireland in which the resources and industries of the country will be controlled by the people themselves."

To Saw It Once You Measure It Twice

AS A VICTORIA SUBURBANITE, I mowed our lawns and swept our drive, applied a lick of paint where needed and mucked out our garage when the clutter became unbearable. Otherwise, I did very little work with my hands.

It was a comfortable routine. More than once these last few days I've looked back on it wistfully.

Before we changed our address to Campbell River RR 1, my wife and I established certain ground rules. One of them was that we would take care of any job around the place that didn't call for specialized skills.

Plumbing tasks of the more complex sort were out. So was any fooling around with electricity that went beyond changing a light globe or replacing a faulty switch. But carpentering was very much in. We would begin with minor projects in areas where I couldn't do too much harm, and eventually graduate to the big stuff.

With the power tools the fellows on the Times had given me, construction should proceed at a brisk clip. I would start with a fence, then correct the sag in the carport.

"Good!" said my dear one, who had been listening indulgently. "Only first, maybe you'll take care of a few little things for me. I'd like a shelf by the window in the utility room, and a board for shoes in the back bedroom closet, and a couple of planks to set my basket on when I use the clothesline."

The shelf is still in the planning stage. I'll take another run at the shoe board tomorrow, keeping in mind a scrap of homely advice dropped by neighbor Nick, who built his own fine house.

"Measure twice," Nick said, "and saw once."

But the stand for Win's clothes basket turned out pretty well, even if I did measure once and saw twice, and I take considerable pride in it.

The grey-weathered planks that went to its making were a gift from the tide, which operates a year-round delivery surface. There are worse occupations for a blue-and-gold afternoon than beachcombing the driftwood tangles. It's not a chore to be hurried. Also, it is subject to amiable distractions.

An inquisitive seal poked a sleek head above the surface where the shallows break to deeper water. Farther along the gentle arc of beach, a sloppy young eagle of the resident flight planed down with legs extended and claws at the ready to grapple a dead fish. Seagulls, a noisy mob of them, had established a prior claim and weren't about to surrender their feast. They heckled the king of birds clear out of sight.

Interruptions of this sort are no aid to concentrated labor. The sun was westering toward the still-snowcapped Vancouver Island peaks before I lugged my last plank home. I hooked up my new buzz-saw, and in a state between terror and delight, eased its wicked teeth against a plank end for a trial cut.

Wonderful! With such an aid to construction all things are possible, although I begin to realize that ambitious undertakings will take rather more time than we allowed for them in those earlier bouts of planning.

Another day was well along before I hammered the last nail into the three-plank clothes basket stand and heaved it into place.

Win came out to inspect it.

"Solid as a rock," I assured her. "I trued everything up with a spirit level."

"It's just what I need," she said, generously ignoring the fact that the middle plank was shorter by an ill-considered saw cut than its mates.

These have been days of discovery for us on a place and in a district that by degrees is becoming home. The first flurry of settling in is over. We can now spare time to watch a moonrise, or visit friends, or share a barbecue featuring a salmon which I, to my sorrow, did not catch.

Our Cleo has forgiven us the indignities of tranquilizer and cage, and arrived at a truce with nearby cats of established residence.

For our part, we have retired one of the worries that we brought north with us. We feared that the traffic on the fantastically over-burdened Island Highway that runs only a matter of feet from our front door would keep us awake nights.

But the highway voice has become no more than a background accompaniment to existence. Let it ease off for a rare minute or two and we actually miss it.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

From Scotland's bonnie braes . . .

Lothian Loom is the label on a new . . . and exclusive to Wilson's . . . line of co-ordinated sportswear which arrived from Scotland just over a week ago . . . and had everybody in a tizzy it's so very new and different . . . so elegant in a never-before-seen-here way! . . . Actually, we're almost afraid to tell you about it in case it's all gone by the time you read this . . . However, we'll be brave . . . Briefly, this new line consists of long capes, slacks, A-line skirts with tie belts, long fitted tunics, and jumper dresses . . . All of these in a cashmere and wool Linton weave, incredibly soft and luxurious-looking . . . Color combinations are nothing short of exciting . . . Peat brown with poppy . . . peat with beige and white . . . fuchsia with camel, and blue with turquoise . . . Everything, including the slacks, is fully lined . . . and while these clothes look expensive, they're actually not . . . For example, the cape is $130 and the skirt just $35 . . . with the other pieces falling somewhere in between . . . And now we come to the sweaters you wear with them . . . Pure merino wool in a nice light weight . . . there are turtleneck pullovers in the new shorter length with narrow ribbed sleeves and wider body ribbing . . . in poppy, fuchsia and turquoise . . . $32 . . . and ribbed V-neck cardigans in these same colors plus royal blue, priced at $32 . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177, and Empress Hotel, 383-1919.

More excitement in Standard's fine furniture dept. . . .

Standard Furniture's new fine furniture department is getting more exciting every day! . . . It still hasn't had its official "unveiling," but people are finding their way up and staying to browse . . . and, we've no doubt, planning on enhancing their own homes with some of the exciting "finds"! . . . Two of the interesting features since our own last visit . . . One, the introduction . . . in their own special section . . . of some beautiful chandeliers from Italy . . . The Dennys bought these themselves when they were last abroad . . . and there are now some half dozen on view . . . very rich and different . . . definitely for people who want something exquisite and don't have to count the pennies . . . because these chandeliers are quite costly . . . Mostly a combination of brass or wood and hand-painted porcelain . . . the detailing is something to marvel at . . . Even the glass which is used for the chimneys has an interesting sparkle . . . which we're told results from the mixing of actual gold into the molten glass! . . . The second innovation is a section where you may select wallpapers at your leisure and with great comfort, because there are big slanted viewing tables . . . and both natural and artificial light . . . and there must be literally thousands of different wall coverings for you to choose from! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

We snuck upstairs at the Unicorn this week to watch them unpacking and pressing a new shipment of cotton knit sun dresses . . . (though why they needed pressing we'll never know . . . looked great to us!) . . . Anyway they're all just as cute as can be . . . Short dresses with flip skirt and sizzle pants . . . halter or low suntan backs . . . Navy, camel, pink, red . . . and only $14! . . . There are long dresses too . . . with crossover backs and buttons on the shoulders . . . which can also be worn as halters . . . Another style has spaghetti straps and tie back . . . comes in a nice shade of dusty rose . . . No pants with the long dresses, but then you wouldn't need them . . . Wear these longs everywhere . . . at home, on the beach, for partying . . . They wash like a charm . . . are invariably cool and comfortable . . . A lot more seersucker blazers had arrived since our previous visit . . . myriad colors of stripes in these long, fitted blazers which look so smart with Oxford bags or slacks . . . plain or pleated skirts . . . And speaking of seersucker, we noticed some all white seersucker pants and blazers . . . little seersucker shorts . . . The white blazer would look smashing over the long dress we saw . . . with white skirt and black and white check top! . . . The Unicorn, 658 View St., 385-5114.

Concubines Out, But Spouses In

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

The B.C. government stopped calling common law wives "concubines" this year.

The term "concubine" was dropped June 1 when amendments to the Administration Act of 1948 were passed, and "common law spouse" used instead.

Both amended Administration Act and the new Family Relations Act give common law marriages more legal recognition than ever before.

If a person dies without making a will, his common law spouse can now claim part or all of his estate. How much of the estate the common law spouse will get is determined by the court, the amended Administration act states.

The old act put a strict limit on the amount of the deceased's estate a "concubine" or illegitimate child could claim — no more than $500 or 10 per cent of the net estate each, whichever was the greater amount.

A "concubine" was defined in the old act as a woman who had been supported by a man she lived with for at least a year before his death.

A common law spouse, in the amended act, is a person of either sex who has lived with another for two years prior to his or her death and was maintained by the deceased during that time.

The second act, the Family Relations Act, lets a common law spouse claim maintenance money for herself (or himself) once the relationship has broken up, providing she has a child under age 6 to care for.

Again, the couple must have lived together two years, and the person being asked to pay maintenance must have supported the child for one of those years.

Before this act, which came into effect July 1, the common law wife had no legal right to claim financial support for herself.

Common law marriages have long been accepted by the provincial social welfare department.

"There's really no difference" between a legal family and a common law family, said Al Mollberg, provincial regional director of social welfare. "They're treated like any family."

A man with a common law wife and children can claim them as dependents when he asks for welfare.

The B.C. Medical Plan also accepts a common law spouse and children as dependents.

"Common law marriages are not recognized by the insurance industry," said Bob Cumberbirch, a local insurance agent.

A man under 30 who is living common law will pay the higher single rate, not the married rate, for his life insurance, he explained.

But insurance companies might have to change their policies and begin to recognize common law relationships, said Cumberbirch, if many young couples continue to choose "living together" instead of marriage.

HER OPERATION NOW POSSIBLE

TORONTO (CP) — The $2,500 which Sandra Frederick needed to get to Houston, Tex., for an operation on her faulty heart has been found.

Mrs. Frederick, 25, of Toronto, had been told by her doctor she might have only five years to live without an operation to replace part of her aorta and the entire aortic valve. Such an operation has not been performed before in Toronto.

However, Dr. Michael DeBakey of Houston has performed 75 such operations and her doctor said Mrs. Frederick's prospects would be "greatly improved" by the operation.

With only her mother's allowance of $244 a month, Mrs. Frederick, a deserted wife and mother of three young children, could not afford the estimated $2,500 required for the trip and operation.

Thursday, however, reports of her plight brought in many offers of aid from the public and an indication that the Ontario Health Insurance Plan might bear the entire cost of hospitalization.

Honeymoon Shining On

By JOHN COURT
Special to the Times

LONDON (FWF) — The word "honeymoon" conjures up visions of nightingales singing in the warm south, golden days in Italy or Spain, rose-perfumed balconies overlooking moonlit beaches, the sob of distant violins. But it can mean days of gypsy tummy and hot flushes amid the noises of traffic and concrete-mixers at some overcrowded resort.

Originally, honeymoon had a satirical ring to it; it hinted that the affection of newlyweds had no sooner reached the full when, like the moon, it began to wane. However, to be fair, the word may have originated from an ancient custom of newly-married couples sipping mead (made from honey) for 30 days after marriage.

Not Blissful

Whether you consider the honeymoon as a gateway to lifelong romance or a warming-up period for the battle of marriage, not all are blissful. One Thomas Turman of Seattle was granted a divorce soon after his marriage. He said that his wife, Viola, had passed the wedding night sitting up in bed talking. Though he was sleepy, she spent the hours until dawn trying to talk him into making over his property to her and taking out a $10,000 life insurance.

No bliss either for U.S. bride Jean Neam — she finished her wedding night by running home to mother. Her husband, a bull terrier enthusiast, not only took his dogs on the honeymoon but insisted they sleep on the floor by the bed.

There have been insecure couples who have insisted on taking members of their families on honeymoon with them but perhaps the limit was reached when a doting English mother asserted her "right" and tucked her son up in bed on his wedding night.

Embarassment

Though few honeymoons involve real disasters, many are bound up with embarrassment, beginning with the all-too familiar nudges, practical jokes and broad jests. A newly-married couple, at the climax of a worrying time and emotionally drained from having taken perhaps the biggest decision of their lives are tired, hypersensitive and, in some cases, almost in a state of shock. Invariably they think everyone is staring at them in their obviously-new clothes and shiny luggage.

Often it is the first fairly complete — and sometimes too frank — revelation of one sex to the other. Is she still a vision of loveliness in hair-rollers? Is he quite the man he was when his false teeth leer from a tumbler? All too often at this time there are signs of emotional maladjustments, tantrums, incompatibility of ideas and contrasts in attitudes which have been veiled or at least not apparent during courtship.

Helga Schmidt's honeymoon, for instance, was literally an open-and-shut case. Her marriage to Klaus in Cologne, West Germany, lasted all of 12 hours. At their honeymoon hotel, she found that Klaus hated fresh air and in the centrally-heated room wore heavy pyjamas and a thick woollen pullover. He shut the window. She jumped out of bed and opened it. He rushed to close it. Helga opened it, Klaus shut it and so it went on.

"I was so fed up that I jumped out of bed for the last time, put my clothes on and rushed downstairs," she said. Helga was granted a divorce on the grounds of incompatibility.

But are honeymoons really necessary? They have been called a "bad, artificial way of starting married life" because the couple are often isolated. British doctor-author Richard Gordon comments that "honeymoons are awful. One tends to think they are going to be absolutely perfect, just because they're a honeymoon.

Ordinary Holiday

"Nobody seems to realise it's an ordinary holiday like any other one, and one should remember sun-tan oil, plenty of books, knitting and a chessboard. A walk on the pier in the rain, even with one's beloved, is a bore."

But most women, at once more romantic and more realistic, take the view that everyone wants a honeymoon to look back on — and if it doesn't go well, you can be sure it would go equally badly at home. As one English husband put it:

"My wife and I gave up our jobs and spent our combined savings on a six-month round-the-world honeymoon cruise. We came back broke, lived in cheap lodgings and worked like slaves for four years. Folly? Not a bit! It was an excercise we shall cherish for the rest of our lives.

Divided

According to a British survey, opinions are equally divided between those who advise spending the honeymoon at home and those who say "get right away." One woman summed up the first viewpoint: "My own honeymoon was 14 years ago and it was spent in what was to be our new home — one room on the fourth floor of a house. But it was our first home and we almost shut ourselves off from the world for a fortnight. It was great fun. We could rise when we wanted and have meals when we were hungry."

But the away - from - it - all - there's - plenty - of - time - for - domesticity later view was summed up by a Welsh woman: "My advice to all newly-married couples is to spare no expense. Think not of the future. For two glorious weeks spoil yourselves and live in absolute luxury. Don't count the cost. You may be doing that for the rest of your lives."

Message from Mel Couvelier

As Liberal candidate for Oak Bay in the Provincial election, I am using this column to communicate directly with the electors in the Oak Bay riding about the issues and the problems which affect all of us.

One of the most serious problems exists in the present government's continuing policy of laying the costs of public school education on property owners. Even 40% of the cost of community colleges like Camosun must be borne by the homeowner although the cost of operating universities like UVIC is charged against general revenues and is not laid solely against the homeowner.

There may have been a time when placing this heavy burden on the property owner was justified but with the rising costs of education at all levels the justification no longer exists.

It does not make sense, politically or economically, to load these educational costs onto the property owner and at the same time declare that a provincial surplus exists. THE COSTS OF EDUCATION AT ALL LEVELS SHOULD BE A CHARGE AGAINST THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND.

By this method of financing education, the burden would be spread over the entire income earning population and not confined to the ratepayer. People on fixed income would contribute to costs of education only if the amount of their income warranted it and not, as is now the case, based on the assessed value of their property.

Community colleges like Camosun are proving to be a useful new development in providing career training and the first two years toward a university baccalaureate degree. But how can anyone justify charging 40% of the costs of the community college directly to the property owner while the costs of the university are borne by all the population?

Similarly with elementary and high school costs, all parts of the income earning public should share in the responsibility of educating the young, not just those who own property.

My headquarters are at 1955 Foul Bay Road, near Fort St., telephone 592-2478. You're invited to drop in and discuss these problems with us.

Sincerely,
MEL COUVELIER

Chauvinism Began Here

CHICAGO (UPI) — As a spinoff of their movement, women's liberation leaders have given new importance to the name of an obscure French soldier.

"Male chauvinism" is a borrowed phrase stemming from the activities of Nicholas Chauvin, who refused to accept defeat gracefully.

THIN DIME CHOCOLATE DAYS NUMBERED

TORONTO (CP) — Stockpiling 10-cent chocolate bars might not be a bad idea now because "by mid-1974, or possibly earlier, the price of chocolate bars will be going up to 15 cents," according to the new president of the Confectionary Association of Canada.

Norman Rea said in an interview the price increase is a direct result of higher cocoa prices, a 12-per-cent federal tax on the product and a reduction in chocolate bar consumption in Canada.

However, Mr. Rea said, the higher-priced bars will be larger. "This will reverse the trend that has seen them become smaller and smaller, thinner and thinner."

Home on Wheels Going Nowhere

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Tom and Ethel Harker live in a mobile home but they're not going anywhere.

The Harkers view their mobile home as scarcely more portable than an ordinary house. They have lived six years in a mobile home park on Craigflower Road and have no intention of moving.

"I love it here and I hope I can always stay," said Mrs. Harker.

Douglas and Linda Ireland have lived in their mobile home two years. But now they're looking for a house.

Living in a mobile home is "too hard with children," according to Mrs. Ireland. Their mobile home is located in a park right beside the Trans-Canada Highway and there is always the danger that their two daughters — 3-year-old Tina and 21-month-old Sandy — will stray out into the traffic.

The Irelands want a house with a big fenced-in yard where the children can play safely.

John and Neddie Alder raised five children in a mobile home on Orono St., where they have lived 15 years. Their home, from which they operate a mobile home towing service, is on a private lot.

Mobile homes have been around Victoria for about 20 years and they're gradually gaining acceptance as legitimate economical housing.

This acceptance, however, is far from complete.

"We have to overcome a lot of stigma," said Bernard Schulze, general manager of a two-year-old company that sells mobile homes and operates a mobile home park.

Most mobile homes are still found at the edge of the city, in unorganized districts governed by the Capital Regional District.

The "newly wed and nearly dead" — young and retired couples — are the standard market for mobile homes, said Dave Caul, an employee of another mobile home outlet.

"In the Victoria area we have roughly three equal groups," said Schulze. "One is the retired, one is people from the forces, one is all the rest."

Spacious Home

Mr. and Mrs. Harker aren't retired — Harker is a contractor — but their two daughters have married and left home and they find a one-bedroom mobile home spacious enough.

Six years ago the Harkers were living in a four-bedroom Oak Bay house with a den, a basement recreation room and a living room, complete with grand piano.

It was Mrs. Harker who decided she would like to move to a mobile home. She found the big house too hard to keep clean and the garden too much work. She found she preferred their small travel trailer they used on summer weekends.

Dreaded Sunday

"I used to dread coming home on a Sunday afternoon," said Mrs. Harker. "There was the watering to do and everything was dry."

So they bought a second-hand, 10x52-foot mobile home for $4,500 and sold their house. Harker built an addition onto the mobile home to make a larger living room. He also built a shed behind the home where Harker keeps a pool table and his work tools.

"In the big house I didn't have my suitcases under the bed," said Mrs. Harker. But that, she says, is no great hardship. Although the mobile home is compact, Mrs. Harker still has room enough to have three tables of bridge in the living room and space for an organ, her husband's photography equipment and her china cabinet.

"When you have a family you need a house," Mrs. Harker said. "Now I don't want a second bedroom."

Centennial Trailer Park, where the Harkers live, is closed to children and pets.

"A mobile home is not suitable for a family," said Mrs. Irene Crause, owner of the park. Children are a nuisance to the other residents, she said.

Almost Sold

"When we moved down here, we were just about ready to sell our trailer," said Mrs. Ireland. They finally moved into the Thetis Lake Trailer Park which accepts families.

To put a mobile home on a private lot, the home must meet National Building Code standards or be approved by the Capital Regional Board. Construction, plumbing and wiring must all be inspected.

These standards do not have to be met if the mobile home is in a trailer park.

"They really should in a trailer park, but in a trailer park the regional board doesn't have the jurisdiction," said Jim Hume, secretary to the Capital Regional Board.

Don't Meet

"There are very few of the older mobile homes that meet these standards," said Hume.

Most mobile homes manufactured in the last year meet with Canadian Standards Association approval — which is not as demanding as that of the National Building Code — and are therefore better than mobile homes built a few years ago.

Dave Caul thinks the National Building Code standards are too high for mobile homes, and would, if enforced, up prices beyond the reach of many people.

The modern mobile home business — that is, mobile homes as two, three and four-bedroom homes rather than holiday trailers — is only about 10 years old in Canada and 20 years old in the United States, said Caul.

"The mobile home in the United States is now taking 35 per cent of single dwelling starts," he said. This means that 35 out of every 100 American families who decide they want their own home choose a mobile home.

"I feel we're five or six years behind the U.S.," said Caul.

Both Caul and Schulze would like to see the kind of mobile home parks you fined in California — suburban, landscaped, with homes not crowded together — established here.

"Here we have only these gypsy camps," said Schulze.

Many of Victoria's older trailer parks were built for mobile homes only eight feet wide. Now that mobile homes are built 10 and 12 feet wide, they are crowded together, said Caul.

Ranchers Buy

"The central core of the mobile home business (in Canada) is Alberta and central B.C.," said Caul. There, ranchers use mobile homes for their workers.

Mobile homes get bigger all the time. In several other provinces, 14-foot wide homes are now being sold, but B.C. highway regulations prevent their sale here.

Prices range from about $7,000 for the simplest and smallest mobile home to $27,000 double-width homes with four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a dining room and a carport — all furnished.

Wrong Term

But mobile homes are not really mobile, dealers agree.

"The word is wrong," Schulze said.

Moving a mobile home any distance doesn't pay, said Caul. Most people just sell their mobile home and buy a new one, completely furnished, at their next destination.

"In B.C., it's going to cost you a buck a mile" to move a mobile home, Caul said. Sometimes armed forces people have their mobile homes moved from the Maritimes to Victoria, but this costs the navy close to $3,600, said Caul.

The Alders, in the mobile home towing business, move a lot of armed forces people and construction workers. And, some construction workers move four times a year, said Mrs. Alder.

Malnutrition: Shopper's Fault

OTTAWA (CP) — A call for a free food program to supplement the diets of poor people was rejected this week by a government speaker who told the Commons any cases of malnutrition in Canada were the fault of housewives who don't know how to shop.

Leopold Corriveau (L-Frontenac), giving a prepared government reply to a demand for such a program by New Democrat Grace McInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway), said cheap nutrition was available in "eggs, poultry and the like."

He said the income of a family did not limit the nutritive value of its food.

"It's rather the way the housewife shops in the supermarket and how she makes meals."

If a family is undernourished, it is because the housewife spends her money on hot dogs and hamburgers instead of better food.

In answering Mrs. McInnis in a grievance debate, the portly MP said all sectors of Canadian agriculture are in a state of overproduction and it could not be said that people are suffering because of a lack of food.

Mrs. McInnis demanded the government produce a report on the possible application in Canada of a program such as the U.S. food-stamp program, which distributes surplus food to welfare families.

She said the government is refusing to release the report, prepared by the agriculture department, either because it showed there is widespread malnutrition based on poverty or because of the government's "deplorable love of secrecy."

In addition to a free-food program, Mrs. McInnis wanted the government to establish a corps of "nutrition aides" to distribute nutrition information to all consumers.

Father Drug Expert, But Daughter Hooked

MIAMI (UPI) — "I thought I was the top expert on drugs in Miami, then I found out my own 15-year-old daughter was hooked on cocaine," former U.S. Commisioner Edward Swan told a congressional committee.

"I handled all kinds of drug cases, from customs, the FBI and other agencies. I knew it all," he said.

"But I've been re-educated in the last 90 days. I knew just this much." He held up his thumb and forefinger spaced close together.

Until the justice department replaced the U. S. commissioners with federal magistrates about a year ago, Swan was one of many attorneys who held arraignments or set bonds on federal offenses, including many drug cases. He maintains his private law practice.

Swan, father of six children, testified Thursday before Rep. Claude Pepper's house select committee on crime. Pepper, a Miami Democrat, and four other congressmen are conducting three days of hearings in the Miami area on the problems of drug abuse among school-age children.

Another father, Dr. E. (Jack) Taylor, vice-president of student affairs at Fort Lauderdale University, described how his 19-year-old daughter was rehabilitated after three years as a heroin addict.

"I wasn't a bad parent," said Taylor as Swan nodded agreement. Their daughters, they said, started with marijuana under pressure to stay in step with their school friends.

Forced Them

When no other treatments or consultations worked, both forced their children to enroll in "The Seed," a project in nearby Fort Lauderdale aimed at rehabilitating school-age children hooked on drugs.

"When I put Kathy in the program, she was 15 and had been using drugs for two years," Swan said. "She screamed for her lawyer.

"After two weeks, when we attended one of the meetings, she still tried to con us, whispering 'Take me home.' Her mother and I just smiled and whispered back, 'We love you.' The experience will tear your heart out."

Four teen-age "graduates" of The Seed and its director, Art Barker, testified that 75 to 80 per cent of junior and senior high students in both public and private schools are using some sort of drugs.

The Seed program teaches the youths nine to 20 years old to love and respect themselves, their country and their parents and to be honest with everyone, the testimony brought out.

For Swan and Taylor there are happy endings. Both daughters, they said, no longer use drugs and the families have gained new awareness, attitudes and knowledge about each other.

KIDNEY DAMAGE NOW AVERTED

EDMONTON (CP) — About 700 young city girls have been spared the possibility of serious kidney damage, thanks to a recently-completed screening program in schools by the Edmonton branch of the national kidney foundation.

The girls were among 25,000 who received their parents' permission to submit urine samples for testing, a foundation spokesman said Thursday.

"When the federal government sees our results, I'm sure it will be more than just a little interested," said a kidney specialist who participated in the program.

The program began early this year when the girls were given a letter to take home to their parents, asking permission to conduct the tests because girls are more prone to kidney problems than boys.

The project discovered about 375 infections, 250 young girls with protein in their urine, about 125 with blood in their urine and another 30 with sugar in their urine. The first three are indications of kidney disease and the sugar content can indicate diabetes.

The foundation began the testing when it received a $36,000 federal grant. The province contributed $1,000.

New Vaccine Found

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The National Centre for Disease Control says a new influenza vaccine is available which is 75 per cent more potent against Hong Kong flu and produces fewer side effects because it has fewer impurities. The centre says it isn't pushing the vaccine for the general public but recommends it for "use among the elderly and chronically ill."

Fashionable Start

MONTREAL (CP) — Construction began this week on a $4.5 million fashion centre for Canadian women's apparel in Montreal's north end.

Joe Schaffer, president of Algo Industries Ltd., said the 11-storey building will be the first such centre in Canada and will house between 40 and 50 women's garment manufacturing firms.

Algo Industries, manufacturing firm with head offices in Montreal, will be a major owner of the building.

Mr. Schaffer said the new fashion mart will offer buyers all the conveniences under one roof.

"It will be the only building in Canada to house complete manufacturing and showroom facilities of women's dress and sportswear."

He said the building "will reflect Montreal's growing image as the fashion centre of North America."

Custom Gardens to Fit Any Need

Fairfield Road garden once wilderness

Mrs. Ed Yamamoto in miniature garden

Custom-made gardens come in all sizes.

On Fairfield Road, there was once a plot of wasteland with trees and outcrops of rock. In 1945, Mr. and Mrs. Nichilos Abkhazi bought the 1½ acres and set to work with machetes to clear the undergrowth.

In the following 20-odd years, the Abkhazis' garden has seen literally thousands of visiting tourists stroll down its paths during the months of April and May.

The Abkhazis put no financial cost to their labor of love. Their greatest pleasure stems from the fact that they have created a garden with their own hands, where once there was nothing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Yamamoto, on Hampton Road, wouldn't have their Japanese garden if it hadn't been for a shipping accident. The couple had not long moved into their present home when the Japanese freighter Yoho Maru was brought for repairs to drydock in Victoria, following an accident in Vancouver harbor.

Mr. Yamamoto made friends with some of the crew and asked if any of the men knew how to lay out a Japanese garden. Within five days he had five volunteer gardeners at work on his front lawn.

Every element of a Japanese garden has a symbolic function. The tallest elements represent the sky, medium height the earth, and the smallest items are Man in the universe. The Japanese look upon the garden as a place of contemplation and the garden's scale puts Man in his place in the scheme of things.

The Yamamoto garden features a pool, fed by running water. During the summer months, small fish stock the pool. By its edge is a traditional toro, a dedicatory lantern which is illuminated by an oil lamp.

On an even smaller scale than the Yamamotos' garden is the apartment balcony arrangement created by Rob Wilson and Robert Lamothe. In area, their garden covers little more than four feet by three, but it packs into its small scope bachelor buttons, snapdragons, napeta, petunias and many more.

Total outlay in bringing a touch of green to a James Bay balcony was about $15 to date, and that includes the cost of a second-hand fire pail, a food warmer top, planters and an old field drain to serve as containers for the plants.

For the two bachelors this is a first try at gardening, and one that has provided several side benefits. Their landlord is delighted with the experiment, for the color it brings to the property. And it has become a conversation piece for Wilson, Lamothe and their next-door neighbors who have a conventionally-sized garden lot.

"Last year we used to watch our neighbors at work in their garden," said Wilson. Then in April, they began growing their own plants from seed and moved them outdoors once they were established.

What would two bachelors do with a miniature garden, if they had to move out of Victoria?

"Take it with us," was the reply.

Jeans Pocket Increased Clothing Profits

NEW YORK (UPI) — The growing trend to more casual attire and the seemingly overwhelming desire of the nation's youth to "identify" has lined the pockets of at least one industry with record sales and profits.

The makers of blue jeans never had it so good.

Industry spokesmen report sales figures have doubled and tripled over the past five years and they say it is only the beginning.

As an example, the industry leader, Levi Strauss and Co., reported 1971 sales of $405 million, a 23 per cent increase over the year before. Net earnings increased from $18 to $19 million. By contrast, sales in 1961 amounted to a mere $51 million.

Another big dungaree manufacturer, Blue Bell Inc., reported 1971 sales of $293.8 million about $55 million ahead of 1970. "Since 1965, when the stock went public, sales more than doubled while profits have almost tripled," said a Blue Bell spokesman.

What brought on such a sales boom? Apparel manufacturers lay it to changing fashion trends and the public's desire to dress more casually. Also, according to Levi Strauss, it was the result of a very wise decision shortly after the second World War.

"It was a conscious effort at the end of the war. It was aimed at the result of the baby boom," the Levi spokesman said. "The man who is 40 now was a teen-ager in the 1950s. Now, he is dressing younger."

The blue jean boom has caught on worldwide. Levi Strauss does at least a quarter of its business in the Far East, Russia and Europe. The interest and demand has been explosive.

A spokesman for the Denim Council said the foreign market is so voracious that in some cases blue jeans are being sold on the black market for as much as $20 a pair.

The demand has caused some problems for the cotton industry, although the immediate spinoff is very lucrative indeed. A shortage of cotton has industry officials concerned. In trying to satisfy the need, the country's textile mills are using about 8.1 million bales of cotton a year. Exporters are sending another 3.2 million overseas. Yet only 10.5 million bales were grown in the United States in 1971-72.

According to the Denim Council, the industry as a whole will require about 400 million linear yards of blue denim this year. That comes out roughly to about 227,000 miles of blue jeans.

The look has caught on everywhere. The kids wear them as a means of "identifying" themselves. "As I understand it from one teen-ager," said a Denim Council spokesman, "Blue jeans are like fingerprints. Every pair is unique. The kids personalize them with everything from embroidery to iron-patches to the frayed look and nail studs. Some even have diamond studs on them." In any event, however they are adorned, blue jeans are never thrown out. To prove that, there's even a good market in used jeans.

Almost proof positive of the stepped up interest in the blue jeans look is the interior of a new American Motors' auto. The inside is done entirely in denim and copies the jeans' design right down to the copper studs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, July 9, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Where security was threatened, you now receive reassurance. You get rid of burden. You are on threshold of greater freedom and independence. Family dispute is settled. Start anew. Let bygones be part of past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Strive to base actions on logic. Overcome tendency to let impulse rule. Leo plays significant role. Be original. Lead rather than follow. Develop ideas. Don't be in too much of a hurry. Grass is not greener elsewhere.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money situation is emphasized. Windfall is due. You gain through unorthodox methods, procedures. Follow through on hunch. One who appears to oppose you is merely testing. You will get green light.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mate, partner has surprise for you — of pleasant variety. Keep open mind; be receptive. Don't permit false pride to mar progress. You will be on the move. Exciting adventures are on horizon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Neighbor, relative confides secret. Appears serious at first — but you will soon be laughing. Remember these words and don't take seriously what appears on surface. Aquarius, Scorpio persons are in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friend is enthusiastic, but may have expensive ideas. Means be sensible where spending is concerned. You cannot "buy" affection. But you can make changes which will open door to greater emotional responses.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What was an established pattern may now resemble jigsaw puzzle. Key is to take time in putting pieces together — family member can aid. Taurus individual appears to play prominent role. Be diplomatic. Don't force issues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid seeing in too idealistic a light. One you trust is having second thoughts. Take protective measures. Much now is occurring behind the scenes. Don't go to extremes. Control emotions. Avoid extravagance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study Scorpio message. Money conditions require review. Consult mate, partner. Relationships are intensified. Nothing is apt to occur halfway. Capricorn person figures prominently. You can settle practical issues.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Confer with Sagittarian. Accent is on special agreements, contracts and marriage. Finish what you start. Round out program. Perceive potential. Avoide shortsighted approach. What appears a setback will rebound in your favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stress your own style and desires. You have much to gain, little to lose. Be daring enough to take chance on your own abilities. Accent is on basic procedures. Set sights on goal. Then move toward it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be rushed. Pace could be faster than planned. Know this and prepare accordingly. Aquarian sets example. Creative urge is highlighted. There will be change of scenery, additional dealings with opposite sex.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are impressionable, artistic, capable of helping others fulfill their potential. Many consult and lean on you. September could be the most significant month of this year for you. You have bounced back from adversity and can earn more and enjoy success.

Forecast for Monday, July 10, 1972

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ties that bind are subject to strain. Legal and other affiliations are put to test. Leo is involved. Part of past may be wiped clear. Key now is to build on solid base for future. Business arrangement is indicated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Change of style indicated. Move with the tide. Update procedures. Get rid of techniques which are wasteful. Steer clear of one who is verbose. Get definition of terms. Develop ideas. Relative confides dilemma.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you rush, you lose. Guard valuables. Avoid scattering efforts. Finish one thing at a time. Stress versatility, but avoid confusion. Obtain valid hint from Taurus message. Check facts and figures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Routine underpaper startling change. What was bound, restricted is apt to break loose. Know it and be prepared. Take nothing for granted. Foundations are shaken. Your judgment is put to test.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Much talk, gossip surrounds you. Key is to be selective. Dig deep for information. Reject the superficial. Gemini and Virgo individuals play prominent roles. Someone is trying to tell you something.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Buying luxury item requires care; check models and styles. You get what you want with aid of family member. Home may need redecorating. Accent on combining pleasure and practicality. Get together with Taurus, Libra persons.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on innovations. Give full play to creativity, imagination. Professional associates will appreciate your efforts. In personal area, loved ones respond. Temporary setback is merely a test. Be persistent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are able to productively utilize information. Refuse to be stopped by one of little faith. Protect to potential. Then do what must be done. Message will become increasingly clear. Long-distance call could be featured.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Strive for appeal to wider segment of population. Come down from ivory tower. Relate to matters at hand. Money question is involved. Many want to decide in your favor. Make it easier for them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New approach to partnership, legal agreement is necessary. Leo can play prominent role. Unorthodox procedures are featured. Invest in your own convictions. You get chance to impress professional superior.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Much that is said adds up to promise rather than direct action. Plan accordingly. You may be pulled in two directions. Key is to choose course that enables you to enjoy work — and health. Eschew get-rich-quick scheme.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get around. Accept and promote social activity. Shake free from emotional shell. Going places and doing things now is your best tonic. One who disappointed you already is sorry. But you can do better.

If today is your birthday you have original ideas, are capable of putting them into action. You are affectionate, need love to survive, will gain much recognition in August. By end of 1972, you will be a more fulfilled individual. You are due for acclaim.

Love's Prisoner

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you from a penitentiary where I have been locked up for two years. I have three more years to serve and here is my problem:

Three months before I got locked up and sent here I met a very lovely young lady. She is 27 and I am 29. She works in the daytime and goes to school three nights a week. She is a "lady of the evening" but that doesn't interfere with her love for me. She writes to me faithfully and says she loves me and will wait for me. She is loyal and true, Miss Abby, and I think about her all the time.

Should I put all my faith and trust in this woman? I believe I really love her. I need your advice and opinion. — Very Truly Yours, "27894" (Not my real number).

DEAR "TWO": If she has stuck by you, writes faithfully and promises to wait for you, I'd say your faith in her is well justified. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: A wife signed "Old Fashioned" wrote to say that she didn't share her husband's yen for X rated movies. If you read between the lines you could see a middle-aged male with a sagging libido. What he needs is a wife who can kindle a few sparks, lose some of her inhibitions and be a little less old fashioned.

Let's face it, that husband is hoping that if he exposes his wife to a few explicit scenes in the biological realm it will give her an inspiration.

It's amazing how dense some women can be when it comes to something as basic as satisfying a man. Prostitutes will tell you that most of their customers are married men. And do you know why? Because that sweet little lady at home knows how to dish out the steak and potatoes, but she's too nice to dish out eroticism in the boudoir. — Reader.

DEAR READER: Before blaming the inhibited woman for batting zero in the boudoir, consider this: Psychiatrists tell us that a surprising number of men can perform anywhere except at home because of their inhibitions. Every decent woman is "mother," so they find their pleasure where "mother" isn't.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "YOUR HUSBAND'S MISTRESS," who ends up with, "What good is the status of being a legal wife when all your friends know that your husband is in love with another woman?"

I would like to know since when is love equated with sexual satisfaction? If that man really loved you, he'd have married you first and had his sex later.

Wake up, Sister. You're being used!

Helping Hand Assisted

COQUITLAM (CP) — An ailing old-age pensioner spent five weeks lingering in bed and surrounded by garbage, too weak to do much about it, and no one cared until Maurice Muirhead came along.

Four children with their mother on welfare suffered through cold, damp nights because their bedroom window was broken and there was no one to repair it, until Maurice Muirhead appeared.

Who is Mr. Muirhead?

He's just a community-minded citizen who decided something should be done to brighten the world of the old, the disabled and the poor.

And in March, the federal government came through with a $31,356 Local Iniatives Program grant to help him along.

The 30-year-old native of Carlisle, England, first realized how some people need but can't afford help around their homes when he moved to the Vancouver area in 1964.

"We found a relative — a distant one, about a 15th cousin or something — and she was over 70 and found it hard to keep her place up.

"So I used to mow the lawn, do small jobs and just help out.

GAVE FREE HELP

An engineering assistant at Dairyland in nearby Burnaby, Mr. Muirhead went about giving help for free on a small scale until LIP was announced.

That brought him into the big time in community service.

With his grant, Mr. Muirhead hired 14 handymen and three cleaning women, some of whom had been unemployed for up to five months.

Each worker is paid $100 a week and spends his or her day completing work assignments prepared by Mr. Muirhead each evening. He in turn receives his information from his wife Jean, who takes requests for assistance over the telephone during the day.

Known now as Needy Persons Household Aid, the Muirhead crew is serving the old, the blind, the disabled and welfare recipients in Coquitlam, Port Coquitlam and Port Moody.

Though entitled to take a salary as co-ordinator, Mr. Muirhead refuses to do so.

He denies that his project represents competition for existing businesses or contractors.

"These are things that wouldn't get done at all," he said.

High-Rise Escape Designed

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Karol Merson is haunted by the spectre of panicky high-rise apartment dwellers, trapped by fire, leaping from their apartment windows to sure death on the street below.

Mr. Merson, 62, a free-lance consulting engineer, watched just such a disaster in a television report of a high-rise fire in Japan.

"The huge building was ablaze and people were leaping out of the top storeys to get away from the flames because fire ladders couldn't reach high enough to evacuate them" he said.

Since that television news report, a few weeks ago, Mr. Merson has devoted himself to designing a telescopic ladder capable of reaching 600 feet.

He thinks he's done it.

A designer of heavy construction equipment, Mr. Merson has incorporated these principles of design into a 600-foot ladder which he says can be erected automatically in 10 minutes. Mr. Merson says the ladder can be transported to the scene of a fire and is designed according to standard road clearances. His proposed 10-ton structure would cost $350,000.

So far, only the local Mississauga fire chief has expressed interest in his design.

Chief Joseph Miller says that he can see the use of equipment like that proposed by Mr. Merson in areas such as this community outside Toronto where there are large numbers of high-rises.

Toronto Fire Chief Charles Chambers told Mr. Merson his equipment would be too bulky and difficult to store.

But the designer isn't convinced and intends to take his plans to the Ontario fire marshal's office.

"Hopefully, they'll listen."

Urdu Language Bill in English Only

RAWALPINDI (AP) — Pakistan's National Assembly was considering an interim constitution making Urdu the national language, but copies of the document were available only in English.

One member wanted to know how people could vote for a constitution they could not read.

The law minister, Mahmood Alid Kasuri, explained: by custom constitutions under consideration in Pakistan — this was the fourth — always were printed in English, then rendered into Urdu after passage.

This one was passed too, but copies still are not available in Urdu.

The problem of what languages Pakistanis will speak, officially or otherwise, is a sticky one.

In the towns of Sind Province, students armed with hatchets and sickles tear down Urdu shop signs. They carry banners reading "Urdu is the brothels' language" and demanding Sindhi be named the official language of the area. In Sind's biggest city, Karachi, more than half the people speak Urdu. Residents are demanding the city become a separate province.

RESENT URDU

In the other three provinces Urdu has been named the offical language. Each shows resentment.

In Punjab, where 90 per cent of the population speaks Punjabi, students want this language made official. In Northwest Frontier Province, Pathan tribesmen claim Urdu is the language of Punjabi domination and demand Pushto be the province's language of record. In Baluchistan, officials argue they would like to make Baluch the official tongue, but contend government clerks understand only Urdu. Besides, no one has invented a Baluchi typewriter.

The government-controlled Pakistan Times commented: "If populations are to be discriminated against on the basis ... of language, then there is bound to be an explosion which will tear this country apart."

DIVIDES NATION

The seeds of the 1971 secession out of which Bangladesh was born in East Pakistan were planted in a fight over language shortly after the creation of Pakistan in 1947. Mohammed Ali Jinnah, Pakistan's founder, and Liaquat Ali Khan, its first prime minister, both insisted Bengali — a language of more than half Pakistan's population — could not share the status of national language with Urdu. Jinnah, whose education after the age of 16 was in England, spoke little Urdu.

Sheik Mujibur Rahman, now the prime minister of Bengali-speaking Bangladesh, first rose to notoriety as a leader of student protests against the treatment of Bengali.

English is widely spoken, especially among three per cent of the population forming Pakistan's educated elite. They wield an influence far beyond their numbers because they become civil servants. Most of the business of the central government is in English.

Hitler-Faddists Revive Cult of Biggest Nazi

NEW YORK (NYT) — Everything's coming up Adolf Hitler these days. Not only is Charlie Chaplin's classic The Great Dictator doing a blitz-like business at the Lincoln Art Theatre, but serious and zany views of the biggest Nazi of them all are starting to sprout in movie studios around the world. Perhaps the first to bloom on our local screens will be Hitler: The Last Ten Days, adapted by Ivan Moffat from H. R. Trevor-Roper's The Last Days of Hitler, which was published just two years ago after the fall of the Third Reich.

Who's handling Hitler? That plumb role goes to Alec Gunness, who has already grown his own mustache. The role of Eva Braun, Hitler's mistress and bride-for-a-day, will be played by German actress Doris Kuntsmann, and Michael York has been signed to play an S.S. officer. The film will be produced by Wolfgang Reinhardt and directed by Ennio E. Concini. Things should begin booming down in the old bunker — in London's Shepperton Studios — later this month.

The seagull is coming. Jonathan Livingston Seagull, Richard Bach's illustrated adult fable that has been a best seller since it was published by MacMillan in 1970, has been purchased by independent producer-director Hall Bartlett. Bach has already written an adaptation and he will serve as an associate producer with Bartlett.

"We plan to shoot the movie on location in Seattle, starting in the fall," says Bartlett. "It won't be a cute treatment of the book, with voices coming from the bills of birds and trick photography. Right now, Ray Berwick is training 50 seagulls ... We plan to remain true to the book, which I feel was a serious contemporary allegory."

We may see a revival of the puritanical, apple-pie way of life, if the title of a movie recently completed in Martha's Vineyard is any indication. It's called I Could Never Have Any Sex With Any Man Who Has Little Regard for My Husband, and Dan Greenburg has adapted it from his own novel, Chewsday. The film, a comedy about two couples sharing a beach house for two rainy weeks, was produced by Greenburg and a flock of his friends, including Marty and Gail Stayden and Milt Felsen. Robert McCarthy directed a cast that includes Carmine Caridi, Cynthia Harris, Andrew Duncan and Lynn Lipton.

Nelly Kaplan, the French writer-director whose Papa, Les Petits Bateaux and A Very Curious Girl were shown at the recent festival of women's films, has written two more screenplays which she hopes to put before the cameras soon in France. The first is called Phallocrat, and it deals with a man who is tyrannical in his relations with is wife and daughter. According to Miss Kaplan, Philipe Noiret and Francoise Fabian have already agreed to star in the film.

The other film, also a Kaplan original, is called Le Parti de Plaisir, and it will document the obstacles faced by a young French girl attempting to obtain an abortion.

Two of Ingmar Bergman's favorite actors have drawn roles in major Hollywood movies: Max Von Sydow will play the title role in William Friedkin's The Exorcist, and Liv Ullmann will play opposite Edward Elbert in William Wyler's Forty Carats ... Vanessa Redgrave will star in Anthony Harvey's The Abdication ... Celeste Holm will be Aunt Polly and Warren Oates will be Muff Potter in a musical version of Tom Sawyer .... Ted Neeley will play Jesus Christ, Carl Anderson will be Judas, and Yvonne Ellimann will recreate her stage role of Mary Magdalene in Norman Jewison's Jesus Christ Superstar ... Phil Karson will direct Joe Don Barker, Elizabeth Hartman and Rosemay Murphy in Walking Tall ... Diana Rigg will be Vincent Price's leading lady in Theatre of Blood.

Horse-Shoeing Still an Art

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Ted Meier helps keep that old gray mare just like she used to be.

Mr. Meier is a practitioner of the ancient art of blacksmithing, but he'd prefer to be known by the more specialized term — a farrier.

Unlike the old-time farrier, however, Mr. Meier goes to his customers. With his forge and anvil loaded on a truck he travels the area around Prince George in north-central British Columbia.

It takes about an hour to shoe a horse, Mr. Meier said, and the cost is usually $14. He learned the art in a school in Colorado.

Mr. Meier explained that there are two types of shoeing, cold and hot.

Hot shoeing involves taking the ready-made horse shoe, trimming it and then custom fitting it to the horse.

Cold shoeing simply involves nailing a standard shoe onto the horse.

Mr. Meier said he much prefers hot shoeing, although it takes much longer than the cold.

The advantage, he said, lies in the fit. The shoes can be made to fit the hoof.

Mormons Elect President

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Elder Harold B. Lee, former city commissioner, school principal and businessman, was named president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Friday.

Elder N. Eldon Tanner, 74, was made first counsellor and Elder Marion G. Romney, 74, second counsellor in the Mormon Church First Presidency.

At 73, Lee is the church's youngest president in 40 years and succeeds 95-year-old Joseph Fielding Smith Jr., who was buried Thursday following funeral services in the Mormon Tabernacle.

President Smith died Sunday night of a heart attack.

President Lee also will head the Corporation of the First Presidency, business arm of the three million-member church.

As first counsellor to President Smith, he was credited with reorganizing the church for international growth. The Utah-based religion has doubled its members throughout the world in the last 10 years.

Elders Tanner and Romney will remain members of the church's Council of the Twelve but Elder Lee's advancement leaves a vacancy on that high church body.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Reaching Out Cures Remorse

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Memory is a very tricky thing. And I am not thinking of the trickiness of memory that causes a high-school student to forget French verbs and remember with astonishing accuracy the lyrics of all the currently popular songs. It is another kind of memory trickiness that bothers me. My memory is painfully efficient with respect to matters which cause resentment and remorse to smoulder in my heart.

We all experience the harsh, bitter sweet emotion that is resentment. Not many of us complain that we have bad memories for the offences, real or imagined, which others have committed against us. Our memories are very good with respect to such things. The resentful personality is delineated in a character in Aldous Huxley's novel, Point Counter Point, of whom the author said this: "The mushrooms sprouted in his very heart, and he deliberately cultivated them."

Another perversion of memory is remorse. Unless you are almost completely devoid of moral senstitivity you will have a good memory for the offences and wrongs you have committed against others. You may, and with some success, suppress those painful memories temporarily — but at times they do break through into consciousness.

A classic study in remorse is in the life of William Wordsworth. In his long poem, The Prelude, he wrote of "the viperous stings of remorse." He knew those stings. In his youth, while on a visit to the continent, he had a love affair with a French girl, Annette Vallon. He did not marry her, but a child was born to them, and there is good evidence that for many years he was hag-ridden by remorse over this.

Critics have suggested that Wordsworth was kept from his full poetic powers by his wallowing in remorse. And he never moved on from remorse into repentance, the repentance in which amends are made and forgiveness sought and changes of ddirection effected in one's life.

Memory is at it most dangerous trickiness when it leads us into remorse. We easily come to think that remorse in itself shows, despite the things about which we are remorseful, that we really aren't too bad after all. Remorse carries an element of cheap, easy comfort — and that helps it to simmer poisonously.

St. Paul was a man whose heart was heavy with resentment and remorse. But he found his way through them to peace of mind. In a very personal section of his letter to the Philippians he wrote this: "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before. . . ."

He was not telling his friends that by a masterly act of will he was able to root out all his painful memories. But he was telling them that he had got them into a new perspective so that they no longer dominated his consciousness and destroyed his peace.

Son Returns to Air After 'Full Repentance'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Garner Ted Armstrong is back at his post as radio and television commentator for the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College, both with headquarters here.

With his father, Herbert W. Armstrong, at his side Thursday, the church leader said his private life is no one else's business and that his public life is more than ever dedicated to God.

The senior Armstrong, founder of both the church and college, said he permitted his son to return last month after suspension last winter for disciplinary reasons.

He said his son's repentance, a condition of return from several months of exile in Colorado, is "full and permanent, otherwise he would not be here."

Armstrong, 81, said God has forgiven his son for self-professed sins and asked why people couldn't do the same.

Witnesses Meet Here

More than 4,000 delegates are expected at a Jehovah's Witnesses' Watch Tower convention in Victoria Memorial Arena July 27 to 30.

Delegates from five provinces and 12 states will assemble to hear speakers, take part in discussions, watch plays and see the baptism of new Witness ministers.

Hussein's Father Dies

CAIRO (Reuter) — Former King Tallal Ben Abdulla of Jordan died at dawn today, the Egyptian news agency reported, quoting Radio Amman.

The former king reigned for barely a year after his father, King Abdullah, founder of the Hashemite dynasty in Jordan, was assassinated in 1951.

He was dethroned in 1952, following a mental breakdown and his son, the present King Hussein, then 17 years old, succeeded him.

Guitarist Dies

Burton to Switch Stage for Lectern people

LONDON — Actor Richard Burton said Friday he plans to give up his career as one of the world's most highly paid film stars to become a tutor at Oxford University.

Burton, husband of film star Elizabeth Taylor, added that he hopes to settle at Oxford in two years, where he probably will hold tutorials on Shakespeare and the theatre.

He discussed his plans following a ceremony here at which a $45,000 cheque from his wife was handed over to the United Nations Children's fund.

Burton, a one-time Oxford student himself, earlier this year was made an honorary fellow of St. Peter's College, Oxford, after giving $250,000 to the college.

NAIROBI, Kenya — The driver of a taxi on one of Mombasa's main streets felt something tickling his stomach.

It was probably a flea, he told himself, according to police. Then he had other thoughts.

"It's a snake," he yelled as his vehicle careened into four parked cars.

Then the real identity of the culprit was determined — a mouse.

The driver, who was uninjured in the crash, killed the rodent and handed it over to police. He was unable to explain to them how it got into his clothes undetected.

DRAPER, Utah — Warden John Turner said Friday inmates at Utah State Prison got to see an X-rated movie because he didn't know it was X-rated.

Turner said it was part of the weekly film program in the medium security section and he didn't learn its nature until it was being shown. "Because of obvious security reasons we permitted the inmates to see the remainder of the film rather than to stop it after it already started," he said.

MADRID — Rafael Peralta, one of Spain's top bullfighters from horseback, has to spend 5 days in jail for assaulting a bullfighting critic.

He was sentenced Friday after a court ruled he had assaulted Benjamin Remacha because of what Remacha wrote about him in a newspaper. The critic testified that Peralta punched him several times.

LONDON — Alan Dowers walked into a bank in the village of Ashville with a toy pistol in his hand and demanded $12,500. When the cashier brought $2,000, he dashed outside. The cashier tripped a burglar alarm and ran after him.

The driver of the getaway car saw the cashier in pursuit, panicked and drove off, the prosecutor said. Then Dowers handed back the money, saying he didn't think he'd get away.

The Old Bailey court sentenced Dowers to 18 months in prison.

BARNWELL, England — Prince Richard of Gloucester, the "mod" cousin of Queen Elizabeth and 10th in line of succession to the throne, marries a pretty Danish secretary today in a 600-year-old parish church.

The wedding of Richard, 27, and Birgitte Van Deurs, 25, will be attended by the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret and Prince Charles, but Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip are holidaying in Scotland and will not attend.

BLAIR DRUMMOND, Scotland — A full-grown African lion suddenly pounced Friday on a jeep carrying Princess Anne through this Scottish safari park.

The princess gave a start when the lion landed with a thump on the car's hood. The Land Rover stopped, the lion got off and slunk away and the princess smiled in relief.

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. — Harry Houdini died in 1926 after a career of escaping which made his name one that is familiar even today. Mario Manzini thinks he deserves the same fame.

The 30-year-old Manzini claims to have tried successfully at all of the late Houdini's escapes, and Monday he will attempt an escape which, he says, will surpass the famed underwater escape artist.

The Bronx-born Manzini will attempt to escape from a packing case dropped to the bottom of Lake George while chained in a dozen pair of handcuffs and antique leg irons. All the locking and chaining will be supervised by the Warren County sheriff's department.

RITTINGHAUSEN

She's Got Her Man

LONDON — Eva Rittinghausen, 38, is now able to marry Victor Goodhew, a junior minister in the British government, following the granting of a divorce decree to Goodhew Friday.

A London court found that his marriage had broken down because of his adultery with Mrs. Rittinghausen, and ruled that he could remarry within three weeks, instead of the usual three months.

Pennies Rescue Titian

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's National Gallery is triumphantly displaying an old world masterpiece painting saved by the donations of school children and other members of the public from going to the U.S.

Officials at the gallery said it has raised the $4,583,800 needed to prevent the painting, Titian's Death of Actaeon, from going to billionaire J. Paul Getty's private museum in Malibu, Calif.

The huge 16th-century canvas was sold last June by the Earl of Herewood, Queen Elizabeth's cousin, to pay off a tax debt to American art dealer Julius Weitzner who re-sold it to Getty for £1,763,000.

The government agreed to withhold a licence to export the painting until the end of this month providing the gallery could raise enough money to buy it back from Getty at the price he paid for it.

Maritimes 'Prey to Adventurers'

HALIFAX (CP) — Harry Flemming, executive vice-president of the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council, said Friday Canada's Atlantic region has been "prey to adventurers, robbed by charlatans, beset by disasters, deluded by false hope and plagued by bad luck."

Flemming, speaking to the Canadian Certified General Accountants Association, said all of this had come about as the Atlantic provinces eagerly and innocently tried to "leap into the industrial age."

He said that as a result, "the most conservative part of Canada now has a degree of public ownership that would be a socialist's dream — if it had not all been forced upon him."

"Our governments own steel mills, coal mines, heavy water plants, fish plants, pulp mills, shipyards and linerboard mills. And this doesn't include the cement plants, electronics factories, fertilizer mills and a host of other enterprises they were forced to take over and shut down."

Flemming said government now was "coming around to the idea that no matter how high the price they are willing to pay prosperity can't be purchased quickly. They seem to be getting back to first principles, that the resources we have and the skills we know are the only valid basis of economic development."

Bear-ing the Facts

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — The Smithsonian Institution in Washington waited in vain for 29 years for two rare Syrian bears to have offspring. Finally they gave the bears to the Biblical zoo here, which discovered both were female. Now the aging animals are to undergo hormone therapy before being mated with two male bears.

Passenger Hijacked Twice

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Franz Lingnau was skyjacked twice this week.

"I'd like to know what the odds are on this," said Lingnau, 44, who spent a total of 18 hours as a passenger on two captured Pacific Southwest Airlines jets.

On Wednesday, Lingnau, a construction company estimator, boarded a PSA flight in San Francisco that was hijacked shortly afterward. After the bloody shootout which ended that hijack, he flew on to Burbank. On Thursday, he boarded a Sacramento-bound PSA flight in Burbank and became a hostage for the second time in 24 hours as the plane was about to land in California's capital city.

Lingnau said his "heart sank" when the stewardess announced he was once again a hostage.

He said he "definitely" hoped the FBI would storm aboard the hijacked plane at San Francisco international airport. "I thought the did a remarkable job in San Francisco. And I was prepared to hit the deck again."

"What else can anyone do to discourage this type of thing? Most of these guys are psycho and just about any false move could set them off. What are the odds against him just deciding to blow the whole plane up?"

The wedding will take place July 22nd, 1972 in St. John's Anglican Church.

Weddings

Eastick — Lawson

Canon B. Page officiated at a double-ring ceremony in St. Barnabas Church, Victoria, on June 3, 1972, at 2 p.m., when Maureen Lynnette, daughter of Mrs. M. S. Lawson, 2852 Gorge View Drive, and the late Mr. M. S. Lawson, exchanged vows with Lawrence C. Eastick, son of Mrs. J. W. Eastick, 1637 Oak Bay Avenue, and the late Mr. J. W. Eastick.

Given in marriage by Mr. Ian Donaldson, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white Swiss cotton, designed and made by herself. She wore a two-tiered short veil with lily of the valley and white roses, and carried a bouquet of yellow daisies showered with yellow roses. Her three attendants, Mrs. Allen Glen, matron of honor, Mrs. C. Statham, bridesmatron, and Miss Susan Watson, bridesmaid, were dressed alike in fine white cotton dresses with navy blue gingham tops, and picture hats with blue bands. They carried bouquets of yellow daisies. Mr. Mark Smith was best man, and Mr. Michael Jenning and Glenn Lum ushered.

A reception followed at the McPherson Playhouse where Mr. John Dyck proposed the toast to the bride. For going away, the bride donned navy blue and white culottes with jacket to match. After a honeymoon trip Up-Island and in the United States, the young couple will reside in Victoria.

Freethy — Ogden

A double ring ceremony was solemnized on June 17th, 1972, at 7 p.m. in St. Michael and All Angels Church, Royal Oak, when Diedre Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. Ogden, Conway Rd., exchanged vows with William Frederick Freethy, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Freethy, Colquitz Ave. Reverend William Hill officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the lovely bride wore her floor-length white nylon over taffeta gown with matching train and a shoulder-length veil. She carried yellow roses. Maid of honor, Miss Melody Holden, and bridesmaids, Mrs. Doris Ogden, Miss Arlene Freethy and Mrs. Sharon Whitfield, were gowned alike in floor-length yellow flowered sheer over gold taffeta. They wore gold flowers in their hair and carried a single yellow rose. Best man was James Whitfield. Ushers were Reg Ogden, Al MacDonald and Ken Green.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. B. Knowles of Prince George; Mrs. C. Hutchinson, Kelowna; Mr. and Mrs. M. Sharp, Vancouver, aunts and uncles of the bride. Miss Winnie Freethy and Mrs. Ruby Klemph, Sask., aunts of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. F. Parker, Courtenay; Mr. and Mrs. Vic Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Lewis, Nanaimo; Mr. and Mrs. R. Parker, Kamloops; Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Weir, Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Perry, Vancouver.

Gagnon — Taylor

On Saturday, June 24, 1972 at 4 p.m. Reverend Jackson, assisted by Reverend Venables, officiated at a pretty double ring ceremony in St. Andrews Cathedral, when Frances Elizabeth only daughter of Lieut. Comdr. John Taylor RCN (Rtd) and Mrs. Taylor of Victoria, exchanged vows with Errol Joseph Maurice, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodolphe Gagnon, Micoua, Quebec.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in an Elizabethan styled wedding gown of silk organza over taffeta. Bands of lace enhanced the deep cuffed full sleeves, and apricot satin ribbon girdled the empire waistline, and fell in streamers over the lace bordered full train. A lace bordered mantilla veil misted from a starched lace headpiece with matching apricot ribbon. She carried a Colonial bouquet of coral sweet heart roses, with pink feathered carnations and blue delphiniums with baby's breath.

Maid of honour, Miss Elizabeth Argall and bridesmaid, Mrs. Gillian Taylor in identical gowns of multi-toned apricot floral sheer carried colonial bouquets of coral sweetheart roses and white daisies. The bride's small niece Pamela Taylor also in apricot silk carried a basket of mixed flowers. The groom's brother, Charles Henry Gagnon was best man and the ushers were the bride's brother, Gilbert Taylor and Fernand Gelinas, with small Kevin Taylor the bride's nephew as Ring bearer.

The reception was held at Holyrood House. The groom's mother, brother and sister-in-law came from Micoua, Quebec. The happy young couple left for their honeymoon in Quebec and will reside in Victoria on their return.

Kolaric — Cooke

A charming wedding took place on Saturday, July 1, 1972 at 2:30 o'clock in Saint Augustine's Anglican church, Vancouver, when the Reverend Canon A. E. Cummings joined in marriage Angela Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip C. H. Cooke of Vancouver and granddaughter of the late Reverend Canon Norman E. Smith of Saint Barnabas Church, Victoria, to Ing. Dkfm. Gustav Werner Kolaric, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Kolaric of Vienna, Austria.

The bride, carrying a cascade of deep red rosebuds and white stephanotis, wore a slender floor length gown of white peau-de-soie and a beautiful handmade veil of silk illusion and Chantilly lace. She was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Georg Kufner of Victoria and Miss Kathleen Hancock of Vancouver, wearing identical gowns of pink flocked nylon and carrying baskets of pink sweetheart roses, attended the bride. Mr. Wilhelm Kraetschmer, formerly of Vienna, Austria, was the best man, and Messrs. Christopher and Geoffrey Cooke, brothers of the bride, were ushers.

Following a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Kolaric will make their home in Vancouver.

Wakeman — Graham

Reverend Robert Faris officiated at a double-ring ceremony in The First United Church Chapel on June 9, 1972, at 7 p.m., when Jacqueline Mary, daughter of Mrs. Shirley Connolly, Victoria and Mr. Norman Dew, N. Vancouver exchange vows with Vernon C. Wakeman, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Len C. Wakeman, Victoria.

Mrs. Lynda McArthur attended the bride. Best man was Mr. David Gallard and Mr. Sandy McArthur ushered the guests.

Kalway — King

First United Church, Victoria, B.C. was the scene of a double-ring ceremony on Saturday, June 24th, 1972, at 4:30 p.m., when Pamela Maxine, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard King, 102-2314 Oak Bay Ave., Victoria, B.C., exchanged marriage vows with Gary George Der Kalway, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Der Kalway of Vancouver, B.C. Officiating minister was the Reverend Robert Faris.

The petite bride on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage, entered the church, which was decorted for the occasion with taper candles, garnet roses and fern. She was radiant in her gown, an Alfred Angelo original fashioned from candlelight toned peau d'ange. The bodice, featuring an Empire waist and high classic neckline, was enhanced by long full sleeves, deeply cuffed. The skirt fell in graceful folds to the floor. Guipure lace appliqued on bodice, sleeves and the skirt and banding the detachable full sweeping train, lent an air of eleagance to the bridal gown. Two-tiered full-length veils were held in place by a Juliet cap of pearls. The top tier, edged in dainty scallops, had been worn by the bride's mother on her wedding day. The bridal bouquet was a loosely arranged cascade of yellow garnet roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Darlene King, as Maid of Honor; her cousin, Miss Pamela Wong; the groom's sister, Miss Barbara Kalway; Miss Meiyan Quong; and the flower girl, little Diana Quan, cousin of the groom. They were gowned alike in floor-length pastel mint Swiss cotton, styled with empire waistlines and leg of mutton sleeves. The full gathered skirts fell from bodices, high-lighted by tiny tucks. They wore clusters of yellow garnet roses and mint hued ribbons in their hair. Their bouquets were cascades of complimentary roses, marguerites and baby's breath, while the flower girl carried a dainty basket of fern and yellow rose buds. The mother of the bride chose French cotton appliqued on sheer in palest tones of mintina. Her floor-length gown was fashioned with high-waisted fitted bodice, mandarin collar and full-cuffed sleeves. The A-line skirt was twin pleated front and back. The mother of the groom was charming in a gown of shocking pink chiffon. The slim lines of her floor-length gown were enhanced with two rows of ruffles edging the portrait neckline and sleeves; with three deep flounces banding the hemline. Gren Chow, cousin of the groom acted as best man, and ushering guests were Malcolm King, brother of the bride, Randy Wong, cousin of the bride; and the groom's cousin, Stan Leong. During the signing of the register, William McNeil, organist, played "Climb Every Mountain."

At the reception held at Craigdarroch University of Victoria, more than 300 guests attended. Mr. George Gray proposed the toast to the bride and after a delicious sit-down supper, Irving Lozier's Orchestra supplied music for the evening of dancing. On Sunday the young couple travelled to Vancouver where the groom's parents held a reception in their honor. The newly-weds then continued by air to spend their honeymoon in Hawaii. For her going away outfit, the new Mrs. Kalway chose a sheath dress of pale pink wattle weave cotton with matching double-breasted, belted coat. A corsage of pink rose buds and accessories en tone completed her ensemble.

The popular couple are members of well-known families and both received their degrees in engineering at the University of British Columbia. They will make their home in Sudbury, Ontario. Out-of-town guests travelled from Iowa, Pennsylvania, Seattle, Nelson, Trail, Fruitvale, Merritt, Squamish, Whitehorse and Vancouver.

A Little Dab . . .

LONDON (UPI)—Jack Coleman couldn't remember what was in the after-shave bottle tucked away on a shelf in the garden shed so he tasted a drop on the end of his finger. It killed him.

Coleman's wife told a coroner Friday her husband had brought a powerful weedkiller called Paraquat home from the prison where he worked.

"He left some in an unlabelled after-shave bottle in our shed," Mrs. Coleman said. "About a year later he found it again and tasted a little on his finger."

Doctors tried to save him, but failed.

'Unwarranted Invasion' Refused

MONTREAL (CP) — Superior Court Justice James Hugessen quashed Friday a search warrant authorizing police to subject a prisoner to surgery to extract a bullet in his shoulder which police say could link him to a 1970 bank holdup in Knowlton, Que.

Roger Laporte, 35, was arrested a year ago on an attempted car-theft charge and was x-rayed when police noticed scars on his shoulder. Police recalled one of the bandits in the Knowlton robbery had been wounded by police during his flight from the scene and three days after the arrest obtained the controversial search warrant.

Mr. Justice Hugessen ruled the warrant a "grotesque perversion of the machinery of justice and an unwarranted invasion upon the basic inviolability of the human person."

"In my view," he said, "the justice had no jurisdiction, either by statute or common law to issue this warrant."

The judgment is the first of its kind in Canadian law and no British precedent is known to exist.

9 IN MEMORIAM

JONES—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Clyde T. Jones, who passed away July 8, 1969.
We often sit and think of him when we are all alone.
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak, when all other things decay.
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
Ever remembered by his wife, Mary, daughter Helen and family.

MORRISON — Bea, July 8, 1970, always close to my heart.
—Dearest sister, Dolly.

240 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

MANUFACTURER'S REP.
Chemical Company with established accounts consisting of department and hardware stores, plumbing and heating firms, hotels, motels, hospitals, etc. requires a factory representative to service these accounts on Vancouver Island.
There is a best market for all product lines. Sales can be supported by strong testimonials and favorable press reports.
Factory representative should be a reputable individual, desirous of building a highly profitable business.
An initial investment of approximately $1,100 will be required for inventory.
For interview write: 1625 Franklin St., Vancouver 6, B.C.
A principal from the company will visit your area later in July.

ON THE WATERFRONT
This up-Island property is extremely profitable for the present owner. It should be even more so for a really aggressive group of new owners willing to expand both the season and the facilities. 51 trailer pads, 4 unit motel, a four-room house on (get this point please) 6 acres of land having 636 feet of waterfront including 100 ft. of foreshore rights with marine way "small boat" launching apparatus, tackle sales shop, 3 boats (rentals), 3 trailers (rented). Many guests have been visitors for 12 years and come from far afield with their trailers on a seasonal basis. Others live all the year round in the trailer park. And so important, the property has frontage on BOTH sides of the Island Highway. How about building a motel? Generous terms to qualified buyer, about $65,000 down payment required. Inspection by appointment and details from JOHN RUSSELL, 386-2955 or res. 592-3248. Mayfair Realty.

"THE TOURIST BUSINESS IS GROWING"
You can be part of this excellent fast expanding Island industry. Over 12 acres of unique, terraced, natural wooded seclusion. Accommodates 100 mobile homes, 20 travel trailers and over 70 camp sites. 3 fine washrooms with all facilities. A small store insures convenience for your guests, plus more profit to you. Most important, a 10-yr.-old pleasant home right on the property offers you privacy and seclusion. All this on the main highway, only 6 miles from downtown Victoria. — Don't be a wisher — Buy this property now. The future is bright. Call

Bidder for Rams Files Huge Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Hugh F. Culverhouse of Jacksonville, Fla., filed a $5-million anti-trust suit in federal court here Thursday against the National Football League, Los Angeles Rams and Baltimore Colts.

Culverhouse's suit alleges that an agreement had been reached last month in Los Angeles whereby he could purchase the Rams for $17 million but that later, at a meeting in New York, he was told the Rams were going to be sold for $19 million to Carroll Rosenbloom, principal officer and stockholder of Baltimore Colts.

The suit, seeking an injunction barring sale of the franchise to Rosenbloom and an order barring the NFL from approving such a sale, alleges the agreement violates anti-trust laws and suppresses competition and would "further monopolize the monopoly power acquired by them the defendants in the business of pro football in the territory of Los Angeles and its environs . . ."

Henderson Takes Post As National Ski Coach

MONTREAL (CP) — Scott Henderson, a former member of Canada's national ski team, has been appointed head coach of this country's World Cup team.

Henderson, a 29-year-old native of Calgary who now makes his home in Boulder, Colo., was a member of this country's national team from 1963 to 1969, when his career came to an abrupt end because of a skull fracture suffered during a race in France.

Henderson takes over the job as head of the men's team from Gilbert Mollard, a native of France. Mollard and Peter Franzen, the women's coach, both retired after this year's Winter Olympics at Sapporo, Japan, to pursue careers in Europe.

Knee Injury Ends Season For Pitcher

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals of baseball's National League said Wednesday right-hander Scipio Spinks would undergo surgery today for torn ligaments in his right knee and "is through for the season."

Spinks collided with Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench in Tuesday's game in Cincinnati. He scored from first base on a double by Luis Melendez.

The 24-year-old pitcher was obtained from Houston Astros at the start of the season in a trade for Jerry Reuss. Spinks had a 5-5 record and led the club in strikeouts with 93. His earned run average was 2.67.

Network Switch

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Hockey League announced Thursday that it was switching television networks and had signed a three-year agreement with the National Broadcasting Co., beginning with the 1972-73 season.

The NHL has had its Game of the Week program on the Columbia Broadcasting System since 1967. CBS was offered the right of first refusal for a new package, according to Don V. Ruck, vice-president of the league.

"We presented our package and when it was turned down we were freed to offer it to anyone," said Ruck. "I'm not at liberty to reveal the terms of the agreement."

Carl V. Lindemann Jr., vice-president NBC Sports, said the new contract would include Sunday afternoon games beginning next Jan. 7 as well as several prime time telecasts in December and March. The Game of the Week package is scheduled to begin Jan. 7, 1973.

Olympics' Roll Call At 10,500

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — About 10,500 men and women athletes from 123 countries have been entered for the Summer Olympic Games in Munich, the organizers announced.

West Germany will have the largest delegation with 405 male and 118 female athletes, plus 134 team officials.

The Soviet Union will send the second largest group — 382 men and 119 women athletes and 127 officials.

Third largest group is the United States with 625 — 369 men and 100 women athletes and 156 officials.

The organizers said the June 30 deadline for entering passed with eight countries either refusing or not replying to invitations. They were Jordan, Iraq, Zaire, Paraguay, Honduras, Mauritius, Guinea, and the Central African Republic.

Richey Upsets Laver

BRETTONWOODS, N.H. (AP) — Texan Cliff Richey upset topseeded Rod Laver of Australia in the $25,000 Bretton Woods international tennis tournament Friday and moved into the semi-finals of the World Championship Tennis event.

Richey rallied from 3-5 in the third set to upset Laver 6-7, 7-3, 7-5 in a quarter-final match of the five-day event.

Zora Folley Dead at 41

Police said Folley was "horsing around" about midnight Friday with a friend beside the motel pool when he slipped and struck his head on the cement. He was taken to hospital when he failed to revive but died about an hour later, police said.

A stylish boxer and sharp counterpuncher, Folley won bouts against several top contenders but his sometimes lacklustre performances kept him from gaining a title bout. His chance finally came in March, 1967, when he fought Muhammad Ali but was knocked out in the seventh round. He fought a few times after that but his career, in a sharp decline, ended in 1969.

SWEDE TIES DISCUS MARK

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Rickey Brunch of Sweden equalled the world discus record of 224 feet, five inches in an international track and field meet.

Brunch, 25, one of the world's leading discus throwers for three years, had a previous best of 224-1¾ last year.

American Jay Silvester is the official holder of the record.

Coach for Suns

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bill Van Breda Kolff, 50, has been named coach of Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association. He succeeds Cotton Fitzsimmons, who quit four weeks ago to become coach of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks.

Sabres Sign Shack

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Veteran winger Eddie Shack signed a two-year contract Wednesday with Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League, the club announced.

HULL SAYS HE'LL PLAY SERIES AGAINST RUSSIA

HALIFAX (CP) — Former Chicago Black Hawks superstar Bobby Hull, who recently jumped from the National Hockey League to the new World Hockey Association, said Friday that he will play for Canada in this fall's hockey series with Russia.

Hull said that Ben Hatskin, owner of Winnipeg Jets of the WHA, had given him permission to play with the Canadian team in the eight-game series with the Russians.

Hull was recently signed as playing coach with the Jets.

The former Chicago leftwinger said arrangements had been made with national team coach Harry Sinden for Hull to return to his playing-coach job with the Jets between the two four-game series — one in Canada and the other in Russia.

Three Share Tourney Lead

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sandra Palmer, Sandra Haynie and Betsy Cullen tied for the first-round lead Friday in the $32,000 George Washington Classic women's golf tournament.

Each shot a three-under-par 70 over the 6,150-yard Hidden Springs Country Club course to share a one-stroke lead in the Ladies Professional Golfers' Association event.

Gerda Whalen Boykin was alone at 71.

When my wife told me we were going to have twins, I raised the roof!

It was easy to raise the roof, add a dormer and presto! . . . living space for the heirs apparent. And best of all, Classified Advertising is a complete directory of the building trades, materials and workmen.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: When we bought Bruno as a pup, we were told his father was a Great Dane and he was going to be a huge dog. So at the same time we bought a bunch of equipment including a big collar and a heavy leash that would fit that sized dog. The trouble is Bruno isn't making it. The doctor who gave him a rabies shot the other day said he was about ten months old. He is not much bigger than a cat and weighs 18 pounds. We love him now, of course, and are stuck with him but don't you think they should give us our money back on that over-sized equipment we bought? — G.Y.

DEAR G.Y.: As you now know, it's best to buy your equipment as you need it and have it fitted. Presumably this equipment is not overly worn so you might be able to exchange it for more appropriately sized gear (possibly even getting a nickel or two in the exchange) particularly if the equipment and Bruno were purchased at the same place.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Maudlin, my female mouse, really hates noise and there is plenty of it around here. Mike, my male mouse, doesn't seem to be so scared of it. So what about their babies? Will they take after their mother or their father, do you think? — B.Y.

DEAR B.Y.: It's a safe bet Maudlin's offspring won't appreciate noise, either. In fact, 90 decibels (equivalent to the noise heard by the operator of a rotary blade lawn mower) may, under certain conditions, send the tiny tads into convulsions. While absolute quiet for the wee ones isn't a necessity, nor even itself desirable, a reasonable amount of peace and quiet certainly is. High noise levels are detrimental to the health of any species. The very young are most susceptible to the effects of noise pollution.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Flighty is my first young bird and, of course, I am determined to take the very best care of him. At the store they sold me everything that was supposed to be necessary including cuttlefish bone. But I wonder if this is really necessary? Why should he need both cuttlefish bone and grit? — Z.Y.

DEAR Z.Y.: Those products don't serve the same function. The grit's on hand as a mechanical aid to the digestive process. The bird's "teeth", so to speak. The cuttlefish bone is, primarily, a source of calcium. This is important in cage birds as their seed is normally deficient in this mineral. The cuttlebone is also handy as a beak exerciser and general pacifier.

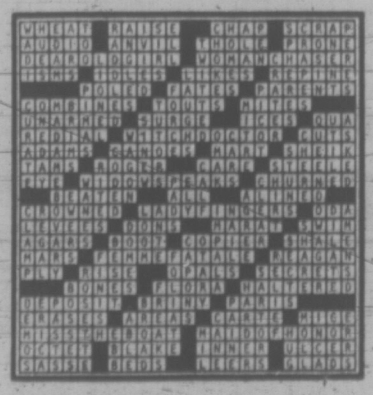
SOLUTION TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



AUSTRALIA CONTESTS MINING

By BRUCE JONES

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Australia's 150,000 aborigines are giving the government a headache with a continuing campaign to get title rights to ancestral land threatened by mining development.

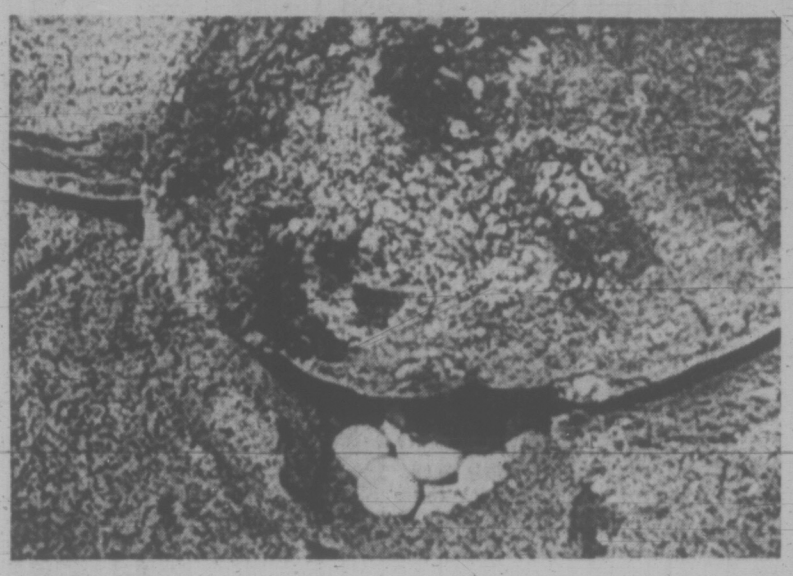
For the last five months a group of aborigines have defied the government to dramatize their cause by squatting on the lawns of Parliament House here.

On Jan. 26—the anniversary of the setting up of the first European settlement—they set up an "embassy" in a tented encampment in front of Parliament House.

Since May 11, it has stayed there under threat of eviction by a special ordinance announced in the House of Representatives. But the occupants of the dozen or so tents continued to sit through Canberra's below-freezing winter nights unmolested.

The occupants of the aboriginal embassy have not been silent. One of their most spectacular moves was a letter addressed to Queen Elizabeth from John Newfong, the embassy spokesman. Copies of the nine-page letter were also sent to prime ministers of Commonwealth countries and to selected British peers.

The letter says that aborigines are the only indigenous people of the British Commonwealth who have not been granted legal title to traditional reserve lands or compensation in some form for those lands not returnable.



Fertile Turtle

Sunbathing tourists on Melbourne Beach, Fla., were joined recently by a rarer visitor — a sea turtle who used the beach to lay 150 to 200 eggs.

The sea turtles, found throughout the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean, usually nest on the beaches of uninhabited islets in the West Indies, and rarely are seen in populated areas.
